Notice to the judgment-debtor is not prescribed by law before making a decree final on the application of the decree-holder but in practice it is given on the principle that it is just and proper to hear the opposite party. But the principle of audi alteram partem does not require a notice of the second application where notice of the first application was duly served and the mortgagor failed to appear to show cause on the day fixed for the hearing. It may reasonably be inferred in such a case that he had nothing to say and there was nothing for the Court to hear from him. A second notice under such circumstances was not required, and the fact that the second notice was not duly served is not a ground for setting aside the ex parte final decree. ——— O. 34, R. 6—Combined decree—Personal decree against mortgagor—Form of.

Where there is a personal covenant in a mortgage-deed, the proper form of the decree is to direct that if the net proceeds of the sale are insufficient to pay the amount due to the plaintiff, then the plaintiff to be at liberty to apply for a personal decree against the defendants for the amount of the deficit. It is not proper to direct that in default of payment of the decretal amount the plaintiff is to be at liberty to recover the same by applying for sale of the mortgaged property or sufficient portion thereof. (Macleod, C. J. and Shah, J.) KESHAV MANJA BHAT v. GOVIND NAGA BHAT. 24 Bom. L.R. 843=1923 Bom. 32.

———O. 34, R. 6—Combined decree—Preliminary decree—Direction as to personal liability—No mention of personal liability in final decree—Effect of.

The preliminary decree for sale of the mortgaged property contained a direction that if the whole amount was not realised by sale of the mortgaged properties, for the rest of the claim, if legally realisable, the mortgagor would be liable. In the final decree there was no provision for any personal decree. Held, that the preliminary decree was not a composite decree allowing the decree-holder to proceed against other properties of the judgment-debtor. It merely said that he might proceed if he was legally entitled to do so thus leaving it for future decision whether the decree-holder was legally entitled to obtain such a decree. An application under O. 34, R. 6, C.P.C., is governed by Art. 181 of the Limitation Act. A Court cannot pass a decree under this rule without an application by the plff. and on such application being made, the Court has first to decide whether there is a personal covenant to pay and then whether the claim to enforce such covenant is within time. 42 Cal. 294, Diss. No application under S. 90, T.P. Act, can be made, after the parties have obtained a Court's decision as to whether a claim for personal decree is within time. In granting a supplementary decree the Court has to consider not whether the application under S. 90 is barred but whether the personal remedy was barred. The application under S. 90 of the T.P. Act is barred if brought 3 years after the sale is confirmed. (Prideaux and Mittra, A.J.Cs.) CHUNNI LAL v. TIKAM DAS. 39 I.C. 854=13 N.L.R. 76.

A person obtaining a judgment on condition and not fulfilling it should be held to have waived the judgment is a rule which cannot be applied to decrees for redemption under the T. P. Act. The T. P. The mortgage charge mentioned in O. 34, R. 14, C.P. Code, is a mortgage or charge existing prior to the date of the decree and not one created by the decree. The principle that a person who holds a mortgage or charge should have recourse to a suit, is recognised for the benefit of the person against whom the mortgage or charge may have to be enforced and it is competent to such a person to waive the protection accorded to him by O. 34, R. 14, C.P. Code, or by S. 99, T.P. Act. The petition of compromise which was incorporated in the decree, stated that the plff. would be entitled to a maintenance at the rate of Rs. 4 per month, and that if the amount was not paid from month to month, the plaintiff would be entitled to realise the sum from the defendant by execution of the decree. The petition finally recited that all the properties mentioned in the schedule to the plaint would remain charged for the payment of the allowance as maintenance. Held, that the decree-holder was entitled to recover in execution without further suits, the allowance as it accrued due. It is not competent to the judgment-debtors to resile in execution proceedings and contend that notwithstanding the express provisions of the decree, the decree-holder must be driven to a separate suit. C. P. CODE (V of 1908), O. 34, R. 14—Money Decree.

A mortgage decree payable in instalments provided that if any two instalments remained unpaid up to six months from the date of the second instalment the whole amount then remaining due would be payable at once. The first instalment was paid in time the second was in default and third was paid. The decree-holder applied to recover the amount of the second instalment by sale of a part of the mortgaged property. Held, that the application was premature as under O. 34, R. 14 where a mortgagee had obtained a decree for payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage, he could not bring the mortgaged property to sale otherwise than by instituting a suit for sale in enforcement of the mortgage. ———O. 37, R. 2—Suit on shajak Hundi—Leave to defend—Affidavit in support—Set off.

An affidavit in support of an application for leave to defend as required by O. 37, R. 3 (1) of the C.P. Code must disclose facts sufficient to support the application. O. 37 contains provision for a summary procedure, which is antagonistic to an investigation of claims to a set-off, unless of the clearest description. (Fawcett, J.C.) O. 38, R. 6 of the C.P.C. empowers the Court in the events stated to direct the attachment of the defendant's property. The power given by O. 38, R. 5 to make an alternative order directing the defendant within a specified time to furnish security or to appear and show cause why he should not furnish security carried with it as an incident the power, after hearing the defendant, to confirm the order that security be furnished. Under its general powers the Court may then, if necessary, extend the time for the furnishing of the security. Where the defendant fails to show cause why he should not furnish security the Court may, under R. 5, direct finally that security, be furnished or in the alternative, under R. 6 direct the attachment of the defendant's property. The power of attachment also exists if the required security is not furnished. The provisions of the C.P.C. do not contemplate an appeal from an order directing the defendant to furnish security. An appeal lies from an order of attachment made under R. 6. Where an order for attachment is made on failure of the defendant to furnish security and the defendant in fact furnishes such security, there is no operative order of attachment and the remainder of the order is merely an order for the furnishing of security not appealable either under the C.P.C. or as a judgment under the Letters Patent. ———O. 38, R. 5—Considerations guiding the applicability of the rule.

The power given under the C.P. Code to attach before judgment should be exercised only on clear proof of the existence of the mischief aimed at. The court must be satisfied not only that the defendant is about to dispose of his property or to remove it from the jurisdiction of the court, but also that his object in so doing is to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him. If the court accepts the view that defendant has no intention of alienating the property, there is no power to order attachment. (Miller, C.J. and Kulwant Sahay, J.) ———O. 39, Rr. 1 and 2—Principles—Interlocutory application for mandatory injunction—Procedure.

Upon grounds of general expediency, the proper course when applications for mandatory injunctions are made would be to expedite the proceedings rather than to grant an injunction; and if the matter is really urgent, something like the procedure in England might be adopted by treating the order on the interlocutory application as a decree in the suit. (Beaman and Shah, JJ.) RASUL KARIM v. PIRBHAI AMIRBHAI. 16 Bom. L.R. 288 = 24 I.C. 625 = 38 Bom. 381.

———O 39, R. 1—Principles—Injunction—Deft. in possession—Bona fide—Irreparable injury—Status quo—Balance of convenience.

Upon an application by a plaintiff for a temporary injunction it is sufficient if he shows a prima facie case in support of the title asserted by him. Where a plaintiff out of possession claims possession, the Court will not grant an injunction against a deft. in possession under a claim of right unless the threatened injury would be irreparable. By irreparable injury it is not meant that there must be no physical possibility of repairing but only that the injury would be a material one and one not adequately reparable by damages. An interlocutory injunction should not be lightly granted because it would be a serious thing if the person in possession were restrained from making use of the properties merely because a suit has been instituted with reference to the property. In granting an interim injunction the Court should see on which side, in the event of obtaining a successful result in the suit, will be the balance of convenience if the injunction do not issue, bearing in mind the importance of retaining immoveable property in status quo. (N. R. Chatterjee and Newbould, JJ.) MESSRS. BEGG DUNLOP & CO. v. SATISH CHANDRA CHATTERJEE. 46 Cal. 1001 = 23 C.W.N. 677 = 54 I.C. 862 = 29 C.L.J. 584.

———O. 39, Rr. 1 and 2—Principles—Temporary injunction—Suit for permanent injunction.

In a suit for permanent injunction a temporary injunction ought not to be refused where the refusal would defeat the object of the suit and amount to denial of justice to the applicant. (Woodroffe and Huda, JJ.) GUNABALA CHOWDHURANI v. HEM NALINI CHOWDHURANI. 43 I.C. 24.

———O. 39, Rr. 1 and 2—Principles—Interlocutory—Injunction—Principles regulating grant of—Injury—Delay.

The only thing to be considered by the Court in case of interlocutory injunctions in aid of the legal right is, if the case is so clear and free from objection on equitable grounds that it should interfere without waiting for the legal right to be established. There is no general rule to guide the discretion of Courts.

C. P. CODE (V of 1908), O. 39, R. 1—Principles.

If the Court finds that there is a substantial question to be investigated and that matters should be preserved in status quo till final disposal of that question, it is sufficient ground for granting the injunction. Where the plaintiff fails to prove that the damage he might sustain if the injunction is refused and he should ultimately turn out to be right, is likely to be greater than the damage which the defendants would suffer if the injunction were granted and they should finally turn out to be right, the balance of convenience is against the grant of an injunction. A plaintiff making a considerable delay is not to be assisted at the expense of the defendant. (Mookerjee and Richardson, JJ.) KRISHNA CHNDRA SAHA SARDAR v. HEM CHANDRA RAI 29 I C. 855 = 21 C.L.J. 469.

———O. 39, R. 1—Principles—Temporary injunction—Principles guiding, grant of.

Where the defendants put forward a claim of right which is quite inconsistent with the rights which plaintiffs sue to establish as theirs, and where it appears probable that the claim is sought to be exercised in a wholly unwarranted manner, out of spite and ill-feeling, the Court will grant temporary injunction. But under colour of temporary injunction a plaintiff cannot seek a relief which forms the cause of action in the suit. (Holmwood and Chapman, JJ.) BROJONDRA KISHORE ROY CHOWDHURY v. ABDUS SOBHAN CHOWDHURY. 27 I C. 647.

———O 39. R. 1—Principles—Injunction, temporary—When to be granted.

Before granting an injunction though a temporary one, the Court must be satisfied that there is a serious question to be tried at the hearing, and that there is a probability of the plaintiff succeeding. (Brett and Chapman, JJ.) KALIDAS v. PROBAL CHANDRA. 18 I C. 394 = 17 C.W.N. 984.

———O. 39. R. 1—Principles—Injunction—Essentials.

In granting temporary injunction the Court should exercise wise discretion and see that the machinery of the Court is not abused for the fraudulent purposes. So where in a suit to set aside decree on the ground of fraud, the plaintiff applied for temporary injunction restraining the deft. from executing the decree, the Court should not grant temporary injunction on the sole ground of the institution of the suit but should decide whether the suit is bona fide or not, especially when the deft. pleads that the suit is not bona fide. (Woodroffe and Carnduff, JJ.) BHABIKHAN SINGH v. CHAKRADHAR SINGH. 9 I.C. 227.

———O. 39, R. 1—Principles—Temporary injunction.

When plaintiff has made out a prima facie case for possession and there is a real danger of damage or waste to the suit property which is in defendant's possession, an order for temporary injunction restraining defendant from using the property is good. (Shadi Lal, C.J. and Flordе, J.) SUNDAR SINGH v RAM SARAN DAS. 5 Lah. L.J. 262=1923 Lah. 227.

————O. 39, R. 1—Principles — Temporary injunction.

The granting of a temporary injunction is a matter of discretion albeit a judicial discretion. One of the prinoiples the Court has to bear in mind is that it must first see that there is a bona fide contention between the parties and then, on which side in the event of success the balance of inconvenience will lie if the injunction does not issue. The real point is not how the question should be decided at the hearing of the case, but whether there is a substantial question to be investigated and whether matters should not be preserved in status quo until that question can be finally decided. (Broadway, J.) KANSHI RAM v. SHARF DIN. 1922 Lah. 336.

————O. 39, R. 1—Principles—Balance of convenience—Irreparable injury.

In granting a temporary injunction the Court has to balance the convenience and inconvenience of both sides where the basis of the appellants' claim would be gone if the status quo ante is not preserved and irreparable injury would accrue to him the Court would issue an interim injunction pending the appeal. The word "injury" in O. 39, R. 2 (1), C.P.C. means an act which is contrary to law. To justify a temporary injunction plaintiff must show irreparable injury or inconvenience likely to result to him before the disposal of the suit, if the opposite party were not restrained by injunction. The Court has inherent power to grant a temporary injunction. (Shadi Lal and Martineau, JJ.) FIRM OF MANOHAR LAL MAHABIR PERSHAD v. FIRM OF JIA NARAIN BABU LAL. 65 I.C. 403=2 Lah L.J. 283.

————O. 39, R. 1 and O. 40, R. 1—Principles—Waste—Receiver—Temporary injunction—Proper relief.

Proof of waste is a ground for appointing a receiver. To obtain an injunction or a receiver, the applicant must show that the property is in danger of being wasted or alienated. To secure an injunction it is enough if the applicant has a fair question to raise regarding his right. The Court will not appoint a receiver while one party is in possession and an irreparable wrong may be done to him by the Court taking possession of the property. 22 Cal. 459 and 4 H.L.C. 977, Ref. ————O. 39, R. 1—Principles — Defendant residing outside jurisdiction—Acts within jurisdiction—Interference with acts of religion.

No Court would grant an injunction against persons residing outside its jurisdiction and not subject to its jurisdiction in cases where they would have no means of enforcing the order. But where the acts complained of are acts taking place within the Court's jurisdiction and a party although a resident outside the Court's jurisdiction appears in the suit and submits personally to the jurisdiction of the Court (not under protest or to question the Court's jurisdiction) the Court has power to grant an injunction against him. Before granting a temporary injunction the Court must be satisfied in the first instance that the plaintiff applicant has a fair question to raise as to the existence of the right alleged, and further that the defendants have infringed or are threatening an infringement of these rights. No person is entitled to enforce his religious views upon another or to restrain that other from committing any lawful act or making any lawful use of his property, merely because it would not fit in with the tenets of his particular religion. The right to worship is a right in aliena solo, and so long as it is not interfered with, the owner can do what he would like with his own property. (Miller, C.J. and Ross, J.) Suit for Possession.

———O. 39, Rr. 1 and 2 and O. 40, R. 1—Suit for possession—Restraining execution of decree for possession—Receiver—Appointment of.

Plffs. were owners of a bungalow which had been let to deft. on lease, which plffs. alleged expired on 30-6-1920. Meanwhile deft. had sub-let the premises or part of them, and as he could not get possession from his sub-tenants a suit had to be filed in which there was a decree in deft.'s favour. The plffs. as owners of the property sued deft. claiming that they were entitled to possession and that the decree which the deft. had obtained against his sub-tenants was not binding upon them, and for an injunction against deft. not to take possession. An application was made by plffs. for a temporary injunction restraining deft. from executing his decree against the sub-tenants. Held, that the Court had no jurisdiction to restrain the deft. from seeking to get the benefit of his decree which had nothing whatever to do with the plaintiff's claim. What the plffs. ought to have asked for was the appointment of a Receiver, so that the Court might take charge of the property through its Receiver pending the settlement of the dispute between the plff. and the deft. C. P. CODE (V of 1908), O. 39, R. 2.

An order prohibiting a judgment-debtor from transferring his property, when passed in the presence of counsel for both parties takes effect from the date of its delivery just as much as a permanent injunction embodied in a judgment and the judgment-debtor is not absolved from liability simply because it is not served upon him personally. A single Judge of the High Court has jurisdiction to pass the order of stay, subject to certain conditions. (Knox, A.C.J. and Piggott, J.) RAM PRASAD SINGH v. BENARES BANK, LTD. 17 A.L.J. 1127=

——O. 39, R. 2—Principles—Stay of execution proceeding in Munsiff's Court by subordinate judge—Specific Relief Act, Ss. 56 and 53.

S. 56 which occurs in the chapter relating to perpetual injunctions has no application to temporary injunctions which are, by the express words of S. 53 left to be regulated by the Code of Civil Procedure. A Sub-Judge could issue a temporary injunction staying the execution of a decree proceeding in a Munsiff's Court. The Civ. Pro. Code is not exhaustive and the Court has inherent jurisdiction to act ex debito justitiæ, in order to do that real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone it exists. 23 Cal. 351 and L. ——O. 39, R. 2—Injunction can be granted only against deft.—Principles.

A temporary injunction can only be issued to the defendant and not to any other person. A suit for a declaration that a certain person is not eligible to stand as a candidate, cannot be said to be a suit for restraining him from committing an injury of any kind. Where a person has been declared by competent authority to be eligible for standing as a candidate at the election, and as the election itself could not be stopped, it would not be right to restrain him from taking part in it. To restrain the defendant in such a case would be tantamount to granting the plaintiff the relief sought in his suit and might deprive the defendant of a right to which he is really entitled. This would be a grave injustice to him for which he could not be adequately compensated afterwards. (Scott-Smith, J.) THE ELECTION OFFICER, GUJRAT v. ABDUL GHANI, ETC. 1923 Lah. 47.

The expression just and convenient" in O. 40, R. 1 (1) does not mean that the Court can appoint a Receiver because it thinks convenient to do so. The appointment should be made for the protection of property or the prevention of injury according to local principles. The words do not confer an arbitrary and non-regulated discretion on the Court. When the allegation against the deft. trustee is that since his acceptance of office he has not paid allowances to the beneficiaries without any other allegation of waste or mismanagement there is no ground for appointing a Receiver in his place. Effect of Appointment.

Where after the final decree on a simple mortgage is passed in a mortgage suit and before the sale, a receiver is appointed of the properties of the mortgagor in a partition suit between them and the Receiver applies to be made a party to the execution proceedings, he ought to be made a party. The mere fact that there is a mortgage on the property in the hands of the Receiver would not take the case out of the general rule that no process can be permitted in respect of the properties in the hands of a receiver without the sanction of the Court which appointed him. Property in the possession of a receiver is in the custody of the law and cannot be seized under a writ of attachment or execution. It is in the discretion of the Court to refuse to permit a sale of the property its possession under a judgment though the levy was made before the Receiver was appointed. 26 C. 127, doubted. The Receiver in such a case is not a new party under O. 1, R. 10, C. P. Code and that rule does not stand in the way of the Receiver being made a party. The appointment of a Receiver is a matter of judicial discretion and Courts should proceed cautiously viewing all the circumstances of the case. The words "just and convenient" mean that the Court should appoint a Receiver for the protection of property or prevention of injury according to legal principles and not because it thinks it convenient to do so. They confer no arbitrary and non-regulated discretion on the Court The Receiver appointed in an action should as a general rule be a disinterested person, but it is competent to the Court upon the consent of parties and in a proper case, without such consent to appoint a person mixed up in the subject-matter of the litigation, if it will be beneficial to the estate. In an appeal against an order refusing to appoint a receiver, the only necessary parties are those who are entitled to present possession. The pendency before the Dt. Judge of the question of appointment of a common manager under the B. T. Act, is no bar to a Civil Court appointing a Receiver in respect of a certain property. Where some provision for the management of an estate is urgently called for and there is none in effective possession of the estate and able to collect rents there is no necessity for making out a strong case for the appointment of a Receiver. A Court of appeal will not ordinarily disturb the selection of a Receiver by the Court except on some fatal objection in principle. The question that the Courts have to see in dealing with applications for a Receiver, is whether, in the circumstances of the case, the appointment of the Receiver is just and convenient, the main object being to preserve the property. The power is discretionary with the Court, but at the same time discretion is not to be exercised arbitrarily but in a regulated manner. Where there are a large number of outstandings due to the estate of the deceased person, some of which are liable to be lost owing to the efflux of time, and the heir of the deceased is a lady and there is a bona fide dispute between the parties the Court is justified in appointing a Receiver to recover the outstandings and to bring the proceeds into Court. Poverty of the defendant trustee is no ground for the appointment of a Receiver unless there be in addition some danger to the estate. Where no specific acts of mismanagement or malversation are proved against a defendant in possession, the Courts should be very slow to displace him by appointing a Receiver; so also, where prima facie the title to the property in dispute is in him who is in possession of the property. As a rule an appellate Court will not interfere with the discretion of the lower Court appointing a Receiver; but where the lower Court has based its order on a wrong view of the facts, it is the duty of the appellate Court to interfere and set it right. The mere fact that a Mahomedan widow is entitled to a lien for dower on her husband's estate is no ground for refusing the appointment of a Receiver summarily without enquiry into the merits of the application. There is nothing in O. 40, R 1, C.P. Code to prevent the appointment of a Receiver in such a case. ———O. 40, R. 1—Grounds for appointment—Money-creditor cannot apply for Receiver.

A Court has no jurisdiction to appoint a Receiver at the instance of a simple money-creditor unless he establishes a special equity in his favour. The appointment of a Receiver is an equitable relief and will be only granted on equitable grounds. In the absence of any special equity in the applicant's favour a Receiver cannot be appointed simply on the ground that it is 'just and convenient' to grant it. The first essential condition is that the applicant must have "an interest" in the property to be affected by the order. A Court appointing a Receiver ought to take care to protect the rights of persons other than the applicant. A prior incumbrancer desiring to take possession is entitled to have the Receiver obtained by a puisne incumbrancer, and therefore by a simple contract creditor, discharged, and a Receiver of his own substituted. ——O. 40, R. 1—Leave to sue—Receiver in Insolvency—Distinction.

A Receiver appointed under the Code of Civil Procedure merely holds the estate on behalf of the Court. The estate does not vest in him, nor does he in any way represent it. Leave of the Court is necessary in order that by impleading him the estate may be bound. A Receiver under the Insolvency Act holds a different capacity altogether. He is more than a mere officer of the Court. Under S. 28 (2) the insolvent's estate vests in him. He alone, and no one else, represents the estate. He therefore is the proper party to be impleaded in the action. No leave is accordingly necessary for suing him. (Lindsay and Sulaiman, JJ.) MAHRANA v. DAVID. 21 A L J. 737=L.R. 4 A. A Receiver may be appointed at the instance of the first mortgagee when there is reason to apprehend that the property was insufficient to pay the incumbrances thereon. Whether the mortgagee is or is not entitled to possession, he may ask for a Receiver, if the demands of justice require that the mortgagor should be deprived of possession. A Receiver can be appointed at the instance of a simple mortgagee. A Receiver appointed in the presence of the mortgagor and the second mortgagee at the instance of the first mortgagee holds the property for his (first mortgagee's) benefit alone and must hand him over the entire income for the satisfaction of his dues. The order for the appointment of the Receiver, binds the mortgagor and the second mortgagee though the second mortgagee obtains a decree on his mortgage in the absence of the first mortgagee and purchases the equity of redemption in execution of that decree. The Court will not appoint a Receiver, in a partition suit between members of a joint family except by consent and especially where the family property consists of land. Thus in order that a Receiver should be appointed of joint family property in a partition suit, special circumstances will have to be proved before the Court will be entitled to appoint a Receiver. When an application is made to the Court to take the property into its hands by appointing a Receiver the plff. must prove that prima facie he has a very excellent chance of succeeding in establishing the case made out in his plaint, and in the next place he must satisfy the Court that the property in possession of the opposite party is in danger of being wasted. The mere fact that there is a dispute is no reason whatever for appointing a Receiver. (Macleod, C.J. and Heaton, J.) GOVIND NARAYAN RAO DESAI v. VALLABHRAO NARAYAN RAO DESAI

———O. 40, R. 1—Partition suit—Appointment—Receiver—Appeal.

The Court should not appoint a Receiver, merely because of strained relations, except by consent and upon proof by the plaintiff that prima facie he has a very excellent chance of succeeding in establishing the case made out in the plaint and that the property in possession of defendants the opposite party, was in danger of being wasted especially where one of the defendants is presumably manager. In any case the facts, that a mere declaration is sought for the land, that the Civil Court cannot divide it, that the plaintiffs appear from the materials on the record to be out of possession and that the Court has no jurisdiction over the apportionment of the produce make the order of the appointment of a Receiver for the agricultural lands still less justifiable than that regarding the other property. An order of a Court that a Receiver should be appointed in a case, without appointing any body by name as receiver, and adjourning the case to a later date for so appointing one is an order under O. 40, R. 1 and appealable under O. 43, r. 1 (s). The principles guiding the appointment of a Receiver are the preservation of the estate pending litigation and proper management. The court is always reluctant to dispossess a party who is in actual possession under prima facie title. The English and Indian Law are now the same. An appellate court will be slow to interfere with the discretion of the lower court in appointing a Receiver unless it is satisfied that the discretion has not been properly exercised. In the absence of proof of waste or mismanagement a receiver should not be appointed. There is no ground for the appellate Court to interfere with a Receiver's discretion to spend money for the conduct of the defence of the minor, in appeal against the refusal of the lower Court to direct the Receiver not to spend. The lower Court will, however, if necessary or desirable, pass orders that the Receiver shall give security for restitution to the estate of such expenses in certain events. 14 I.C. 277; 5 I.C. 69; 17 C.W.N. 1; 35 C. 568, Foll. C. P. CODE (V of 1908), O. 40, R. 1—Privy Council Appeal.

An appointment of a Receiver and the vesting of property in him is a matter of judicial discretion which can and must be exercised according to the merits and circumstances of each case and the sole consideration being to guard against possible waste or alienation of the property. But a bona fide possessor of property should not be superseded by a Receiver except on equitable grounds. 22 C. 279; 32 C. 141; 31 C. 214, expl. and dist. Removal of Receiver.

———O. 40, R. 1—Removal of Receiver—Power to appoint if includes power to remove—General Clauses Act (X of 1897), S. 16—Burden of proof.

A power to appoint a Receiver does not of itself include a power to remove him as S 16 of the General Clauses Act has no application to appointments of Receivers by Court. The burden of proving circumstances justifying the removal of a Receiver is upon the person applying for such removal. The appointment of the next friend of a minor as a Receiver to manage his property is not illegal. (Seshagiri Aiyar and Napier, JJ.) RUKMANI AMMAL v. ADVOCATE GENERAL OF MADRAS.

Selection of Receiver.

———O. 40, R. 1—Selection of Receiver—Party to a litigation, if can be appointed, Receiver.

Ordinarily a party to a litigation should not be appointed a Receiver unless very exceptional circumstances are established to justify such an appointment. The Court can appoint a Receiver until the hearing of a partition suit wherever it is just and convenient and the necessity for a Receiver will be greater when one party is in exclusive occupation in which case the Court may also allow the party in sole occupation to elect to pay to other an occupation rent or may require him to furnish security for the account for the share of the rents and profits to the other party. 18 C.L.J. 638 = 22 I.C. 601 = 18 C.W.N. 533.

———O. 40, R. 1—Selection of Receiver—Parties.

The selection and appointment of a Receiver is a matter of judicial discretion to be determined by the Court according to the circumstances of the case and the exercise of this discretion will rarely be interfered with by the appellate Court. Unless a special case is made out one of the parties to a suit will not be appointed without the consent of the other. When a non-resident is appointed Receiver, there must be adequate guarantee that he will be subject to the effective control of the Court. The fact that the Receiver resides at a great distance from the property to be managed, is not an absolute disqualification but is an important circumstance to be taken into consideration. ———O. 40, R. 1—Selection of Receiver—Appeal—Ground for.

A person who is guardian of an incapacitated deft. in a suit is not always disqualified to be a Receiver. The Court has to consider the whole circumstances of the particular case in making such appointments and the appellate Court will not interfere unless a general principle can be shown to have been infringed. (Oldfield and Sadasiva Iyer, JJ.) AIYA NADAR v. TENAMMAL. (1916) 2 M.W.N. 256 = 33 I.C. 939 = 4 L.W. 283.

———O. 40, R. 1—Selection of Receiver—Appointment of party.

Under special circumstances of the case, the appointment by a Court of one of the parties as a Receiver, without the consent of the other, is justified. (Oldfield, J.) In re. THYYANAYAKI ACHI. 25 I.C. 602.

It is clear law that as a Receiver is an officer of the Court he cannot be sued for acts done in his official capacity by a third party except with the leave of the Court. Ordinarily the party feeling aggrieved by the Receiver's conduct should seek redress against him in the very proceeding in which he was appointed as Receiver and any separate proceeding taken against him either in that Court or elsewhere should be with the leave of the Court under whose authority the Receiver was acting. The general principle applied to an order for the appointment of a Receiver by a Court of competent jurisdiction. At the time of adjustment of accounts the Receiver and other interested parties have a right to be heard. A Receiver will not be permitted without Court's sanction to incur expenditure seriously diminishing the funds entrusted to him. If a Receiver proves that a transaction made by him is beneficial to the parties interested, he must be allowed credit for such transaction. In an appeal from order under O. 40, R. 4 it is open to the Receiver to question the correctness of the amount said to be due from him. A Court should first direct the Receiver to submit his accounts for the period during which he was in possession of the properties; and then give the plaintiff an opportunity to surcharge and falsify them and raise his objection to them. Thereafter hearing the objections he should decide the exact amount which the Receiver is liable to pay. ———O. 41, R. 5—Order for—Security—No Appeal lies.

An injunction was granted to stay execution on the condition of filing security. The judgment-debtor thereupon offered to hypothecate his immoveable property by way of security. Where the learned Judge in Chambers has exercised a discretion vesfed in him by law his order should not be disturbed unless there is anything to show that it was without jurisdiction or was passed with material irregularity or there is any adequate proof that some loss would be occasioned by it to the appellant which can be called substantial. Where one obvious loss is that the appeal which is pending becomes useless, another probable loss is that the business of the appellant firm will be seriously disturbed by their account books passing into the hands of the receiver, and where the process is likely to be a protracted and expensive one, the balance of convenience is in favour of staying the execution rather than proceeding with it. C. P. CODE (V OF 1908), O. 41, R. 10.

Poverty of the appellant by itself is not a sufficient ground for an order directing a security to be given. But no case has gone to the length of saying that mere want of means on the part of the appellant is a sufficient ground for dispensing with security. The true rule is that poverty of an appellant, standing by itself and without reference to the general facts of the case under appeal ought not to be considered sufficient to warrant his being required to furnish security for costs. 8 A. 203 and other cases cited. Mere poverty of the appellant is no ground for demanding security. It must be shown that the appellant is a mere puppet in the hands of others and that he is merely a nominal party acting on behalf of others who are keeping themselves behind the scene. It is unnecessary to ask the appellant to furnish security for ths costs incurred by the respondent in the Court below, for the respondent has got a decree for costs in his favour and is entitled to execute that decree. Dismissal of an appeal under O. 41, R, 11, is a decree and supersedes the decree of the lower Court. Therefore, after the dismissal of an appeal, under O. 41, R. 11, the decree cannot be reviewed by the Court of first instance on the application of the appellant but in so far as a co-party who did not appeal is concerned, the decree of the Lower Court is not affected by the result of the appeal and continues to be reviewable. A party, therefore, who was not appellant may apply for a review of judgment, though an appeal by a co-party is pending except in two cases first, where the ground for review and the ground for appeal is the same, and secondly, when as respondent in the appeal he can present to the Appellate Court the grounds of review. —— O. 41 R. 19—Sufficient cause—Case put down lower in the list without notice to petitioners vakil.

There is no rule laying down that where a Judge for any reason orders a case, which is before him, for having, to be put down lower in the list he must give notice to the counsel of the parties in other cases. On the other hand the counsel are expected to be present within the compound of the Court if they have got any case in the list. Where at the time of the hearing of a case transferred lower down in the list without notice to the appellant, the appellant's counsel was not present in court and the appeal was consequently dismissed for default. Held that there was no cause for the restoration of the appeal. ——O. 41, R. 19—Dismissal for default—Application to restore—Summary rejection.

An application to restore an appeal dismissed for dafault, an appellant cannot be rejected summarily without giving appellant the opportunity to establish the grounds set forth therein. Through error of a pleader in noting a wrong date in his diary as the date of the appeal was not a sufficient cause for restoring the appeal dismissed for default, the Court could have passed an order of restoration if it considered that a case for such an order had been made. As the default was not intentional and was due to a bona fide error of appellant's pleader. the Court should in the case have passed such an order. Appeal.

——O. 41, R. 23—Appeal—Remand order made under inherent power—C. P. C., O. 43, Sub-R. 1 (u).

In a suit for partition, the defendants resisted the claim of the plaintiffs in the Primary Court on the allegation that the land had been previously partitioned by metes and bounds and that they and their predecessors had long been in separation. The trial Court held in favour of the defendants and dismissed the suit. Upon appeal, the plaintiffs asked for permission to adduce in evidence any entry in the record of rights which had been finally published after the date of the decree of the Trial Court. The lower Appellate Court acceded to the request of the plaintiff and set aside the decree of the Court of first instance and directed a re-trial of the suit with reference to the entry in the record of rights and such other evidence as might be adduced by both the litigants. Against this order for re-trial the defendants preferred an appeal to the High Court. Held (1) that the order of remand was made not under the provisions of O. 41, R 23. C. P. C. but under the inherent powers of the Court (2) that an appeal lay against the order of the lower Appellate Court in as much as it amounted to a decree irrespective of the provisions of O. 43, R. 1 (u) C. P. C. (3) that the admission of the record of rights was justified under the circumstances of the case. (Mookerjee and Cholzner, JJ.) BHAIROB CHANDRA DUTTA v. KALI KUMAR DUTTA. 37 C. L. ——O. 41, R. 23 and O. 43, R. 1 (4)—Appeal—Remand—Powers of appellate Court—Inherent power.

In a suit for dissolution of partnership and rendition of accounts, the trial court appointed a Commissioner to examine the account books and then passed a preliminary decree based upon the Commissioner's report. On appeal the District Judge was of opinion that the trial of the suit in the first court had not been a satisfactory one and that the pleadings of both parties ought to have been required to be amended. He set aside the whole proceedings of the trial Court and remanded the case for a new trial. The order of remand did not show under what provision of the Code it professed to have been made. The defendants having appealed from the order of remand, the question arose whether an appeal lay. Held without expressly deciding the question whether the District Court had an inherent right of remand and whether an appeal lay from a remand made in the exercise of such a right, that having regard to the fact that the policy of the Allahabad High Court had always been to allow as wide a meaning as was reasonably possible to O. 41, R. 23. There can be no appeal from an order of remand under O. 41, R. 23 of the Code of Civil Procedure where the question involved is one of custom. As the Appellant would have a right of second appeal from the decree of the Appellate Court only if he were to obtain a certificate under sub-S. 3 of S. 40 of the Punjab Courts Act, it could not be said definitely that an appeal would lie from the decree of the appellate Court. The question of custom can be agitated in second appeal from the final decree if the certificate is obtained. (Scott Smith and Forde, JJ.) MT. CHANDO v. MIRAN BAKHSH. 5 Lah. L. J. 392 : 73 I. The Legislature intended to put orders of remand on exactly the same footing as appellate decree and to make them appealable on precisely the same grounds. If a mistake in deciding the question of custom can be corrected in an appeal from an appellate decree it is reasonable to hold that it can be and ought to be corrected in an appeal from an order of remand also, 20 I. C. 788 Approved.

Per Martineau, J.—The competency of a second appeal is not dependent on the question whether the decision of the lower Appellate Court is based on a finding of fact or on a finding of law for even when the decision is based on a finding of fact a second appeal will be on one of the grounds mentioned in S. 41 (1) (b) and (c) of the Punjab Courts Act. Whether or not a second appeal lies depends on the nature and value of the suit a second appeal not being barred by S. 42 (2) only in a suit of the nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes when the amount or value of the subject matter of the suit does not exceed Rs. 500. S. 42 (1) merely restricts the grounds on which a second appeal can be entertained to those mentioned in S. 41. (Shadi Lal, C.J Abdul Raoof and Martineau, JJ.) MT. UMRI v. SHAH MAHOMED. 4 L. L. Per Walsh, J.—Whether upon a remand order being wrongly made, the decree and all the proceedings taken under that order, are null and void, depends on the circumstances in each case and on the nature of the invalidity of the remand order. If the remand order is finally set aside and is such an order as ought not to have been passed at all in any case it may be that the proceedings in the court below fall with it. It would be turning the law into absurdity, and would amount to a denial of justice if a proper trial which has taken place under a remand order made by the appellate Court and in obedience to such remand order were held to be invalid where as the result of the High Court's own decision that remand order turned out to have been perfectly justified. Tho mortgagees sued on a mortgage but their suit was dismissed on the ground that there was no consideration for the mortgage. The defts. did not support the decision of the Lower Court on any other ground before the High Court, but raised the question of invalid attestation under S. 59 of the T. P. Act after remand before the Lower Court. Held, that the Lower Court could not frame a fresh preliminary issue where the case is remanded, as the effect of the remand order was to send back the case to the first court to try the remaining issues. The technical plea of attestation ought to be treated as raised for the first time in appeal. The defendants having failed to raise the objection before the High Court, precluded themselves from raising it at the subsequent stage of the same litigation either as res judicata or on the general discretion of the Appellate Court in dealing with substantially new pleading taken

A High Court in the exercise of its power of supervision under the Charter can assume in certain cases, an authority to limit the scope of certain appeals remanded to the lower Courts without keeping them in its own file. But in such a case it is absolutely essential that the High Court should lay down clearly that it did intend to limit the scope of the appeal to certain specified questions. In the absence of any limitation, the whole appeal on remand becomes open for decision by the lower Appellate Court. A remand made by an Appellate Court without retaining the appeal on its own file necessarily reopens the whole case and the Lower Court of appeal to which the case is remanded is bound to hear the appeal upon the judgment of the Court of first instance. Finality of order.

——O. 41, Rr. 23 and 25—Finality of order—Decision on issues in remand order, if binds Judge or his successor at final hearing—Decision, if preliminary decree or interloculory order — Appeal.

Where an Appellate Court remands a suit for findings on certain issues and it decides certain issues on receipt of the findings of the first Court on these issues, the Court is not bound to reconsider its findiogs on the merits whether the officer before whom the appeal finally came for hearing was the same or another officer. Richardson, J.:— An opinion incidentally, or provisionally, expressed in a remanding judgment would not amount to a final adjudication so as to conclude the parties but an adjudication by the remanding judge would bind him and his successor at the final hearing. One test for determining whether such an adjudication is or is not final and conclusive so far as it goes is whether it does or does not amount to a preliminary decree. Per Mullick, J.:— Though a Court can revise after remand, interlocutory decisions made either by itself or by any officer of co-ordinate jurisdiction, yet as a matter of practice a Court will not and ought not to do so. When however, the interlocutory decision amounts to a preliminary decree within S. 2 of the C. P. C. the Court is not competent to revise that decree till it is duly set aside or amended according to law. Authorities reviewed. (Richardson and Mullick. JJ.) HARIALAL BAL v, ETBARMANDAL.

The power of the Appellate Court to direct a remand is wider than that indicated in O. 41, R. 23. Assuming for a moment that an order made in the exercise of the inherent powers of High Court has been improperly made ; that is, made under circumstances which do not justify it. Such an order is not without jurisdiction. It is an order made with jurisdiction though the jurisdiction may have beeu erroneously exercised. A remand Order made on second appeal is, unless a review of it be obtained within the prescribed time a conclusive determination of the points of law involved in it; and the correctness of Law laid down upon a remand cannot be questioned on a subsequent second appeal; nor is the fact of the courts adopting a different view of the law after an order has been made in general a good ground for allowing a review of such order after the time

The lower Appellate Court referred certain issues for trial to the court of first instance. After the findings, which were against the defendant had been received, the defendant failed to prefer objections to the findings within the ten days' time allowed. The lower Appellate Court thereupon without considering the finding on the merits decided the appeal, considering those findings to be final and dismissed the appeal. The defendant preferred a second appeal urging that the action of the District Judge was not warranted by law, and that he ought to have himself considered whether the findings were good or bad findings and should have decided the case. Held that the Lower Appellate Court ought to have itself considered the correctness or otherwise of the findings returned by the trial Court before deciding the appeal, 6 A. 391 referred to. Where a Court at the first hearing does not decide the case but merely remits certain specific issues it is open to the Court before which the case ultimately comes to disregard the findings on those issues and equally to form its own opinion on the whole case irrespective of anything that is said in the remand order. An order remanding issues under O. 41, R, 25 is not a final order. No appeal lies against it. The responsibility for the decree ultimately passed is entirely that of the Court before which the case comes after remand. It is quite otherwise with an order of remand passed under O. 41, R. 23 for this is an order which does finally determine subject to any right of appeal the issues which it decides. 15 I. C. 670.

——O. 41, Rr. 25 and 26—Scope of—Remand—Calling for findings—Distinction.

It cannot as a matter of principle be affirmed broadly that when an order has been made under O. 41, R. 25, the Court called upon to determine the appeal finally under O. 41, R 26, is competent to treat the order as erroneously made, when an order has been made under O. 41, R. 25, the appeal remains pending and undisposed of on the file of the Court. The order, however, whether rightly or wrongly made, is an order made with jurisdiction, its validity may be attacked on review but till it has been set aside in an appropriate proceeding, it must be treated as an interlocutory one which is operative in law. If the order had been made under O. 41, R 23, its propriety would not have been challenged in an appeal against the final decree made after remand. The same principle is applicable to order under O 41, R. 25, subject to the reservation that as the appeal remains pending, the ultimate decision must be based upon a consideration of all the findings before and after the order under O. 41, R 25. This, indeed, is plain from the language used by the legislature in O. 41, R. 26. The evidence and findings become part of the record in the suit and when the Court proceeds to determine the appeal such determination must be based upon all the materials on the record; these include whatever was part of the record as it stood before the order under O. 41, R. 25 was made, as also what has been added in the Court of appeal namely, the order together with the evidence taken pursuant thereto and the reasoned findings thereon. No portion of the record can be disregarded and neither the order nor the materials placed on the record on the basis thereof can be rejected as if brought in without lawful authority. ——0. 41, R. 27—Additional evidence—Direction of appellate Court.

A party cannot claim admission of additional evidence, oral or documentary, as a matter of right. The rule however gives a discretion to the court of appeal to allow the production of such evidence. Rule 27 of Order 41 lays down definite limits within which additional evidence may be produced in appellate court. The words 'any other substantial cause' mean a cause ejusdem generis to the grounds already mentioned or, in other words, as meaning a case at least analogous to those specified previously. It is not open to a court of second appeal to interfere with discretion exercised by lower appellate court. (Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.) BADRI PRASAD v. MUKANDI. 9 O. L. J. 505 : 75 I. The legitimate occasion for the admission of additional evidence by an Appellate Court arises when on examining the evidence as it stands some inherent defect or lacuna becomes apparent. The mere fact that when one party applies for additional evidence being received, the other side also requests permission to let in additional evidence, does not amount to waiver of his right to object in second appeal, to the procedure of the Appellate Court. Where a Lower Appellate Court refuses to admit a certain material document as additional evidence under O. 41, R. 27, of the C. P. C, the High Court cannot interfere in second appeal and hold that such additional evidence ought to have been admitted by the Lower Appellate Court. It has long been the practice of the High Courts not to entertain second appeals from refusals of the Lower Appellate Court to admit fresh evidence under O, 41, R. 27, of the C.P.C. and such practice should not departed from. Where an appeal has been preferred, a review is out of question and the party's proper course is to apply to the appellate court, which is in possession of the case, to admit the additional evidence either under the general principles of law or under the specific provisions of Rule 27, which lays down that the appellate court may for any other substantial cause, viz., other than those particularly specified, allow such evidence or documents to be produced or witnesses to be examined. ——0, 41, R, 27—Substantial cause.

There is ample authority for holding that the cause in O. 41, R. 27, C. P. ——0. 41, R. 27—"Substantial cause"—Interpretation of—Necessity—Recitals in document whether enough.

Fresh evidence cannot be called in cases where no evidence has been adduced in the lower Court in respect of any issue and where there is consequently no inherent locuna or defect. Per Phillips, J.—In interpreting the words, "for other substantial cause" in O. 41, R 27, the facts of each case must be taken into account and an answer supplied accordingly, subject to the principles governing the case. ——0. 41, Rr. 27 and 33—Substantial cause—Meaning of.

An Appellate Court can receive additional evidence if it thinks necessary to do so in the interests of justice. The discovery of fresh evidence and inability to produce it through no fault or negligence of the party producing it in the Appellate Court, is 'substantial cause' within the meaning of the rule for admission of such evidence. ——0, 41, R. 27—Substantial cause—Meaning of.

The words 'any other substantial cause' in O. 41, R. 27, of the Code should not be construed narrowly as suggested by the doctrine of Ejusdem Generis, so as to confine them to causes of the same kind as those stated in the earlier part of the section. (Per Sundara Airar, J.) The expression "to enable it to pronounce judgment" cannot

——O. 41, R. 27—Substantial cause—Meaning of.

Per Abdur Rahim, J.—The words "any other substantial cause" should not be construed in a wide and unrestricted sense but they refer to the same class of cases as the one sepecifically named; evidence should be allowed when on looking to the record as it stands, some inherent defect becomes evident. The rule does not cover cases where the evidence on record suggests that a certain plea, which one of the parties might have relied upon, but did not, is open and proceeds to take additional evidence which is not necessary to enable the Appellate Court to pronounce judgment. The plff. then produced formal evidence by examining a witness to prove the signature of one of the attesting witnesses to the deeds. Held, that under these circumstances there was substantial cause to justify the Appellate Court under S. 151 and O. 41, R. 27, of the C. ——O. 41, R. 27—Sufficient cause—Power of Appellate Court to take—Additional evidence.

O. 41, R. 27 (b), C. P. C. does not mean that in order to enable an Appellate Court to pronounce judgment in favour of a particular party additional evidence could be admitted in appeal but it means only that where it is impossible to pronounce judgments at all on the evidence, the court may call for witnesses. O. 41, R. 27, C. P. Code, does not provide that in order to enable the Appellate Court to pronounce judgment in favour of a particular party additional evidence may be admitted in appeal. The legitimate occasion for the use of the power conferred by O. 41, R. 27, C.P.C. on Appellate Court is, when, on examining the evidence as it stands, an inherent defect or locuna becomes

——O. 41, R. 27—Sufficient cause—Limits of the discretion.

The object of O. 41, R. 27, of C. P. C. is not to enable the court to supplement the evidence that a party is bound to produce and it should not be used with a view to supply defects and loopholes that a vigilant litigant is required to guard against in the conduct of his case. It is strictly prohibited for an Appellate Court to admit evidence in appeal solely at the instance of a party without having satisfied itself that there is any difficulty in deciding the case upon the evidence already on the record. ——O. 41, R. 27—Sufficient cause—What is.

O. 41, R. 27, of the C. P. C. does not empower the Court to pronounce the judgment in favour of a particular party and for that reason admit additional evidence on appeal. It only means that where it is not possible to pronounce judgment at all on the evidence as it stands the Court may admit additional evidence to enable it do so. ——O. 41, R. 27 (b)—Sufficient cause—Addition of evidence.

O. 41, R. 27 (b), authorises an Appellate Court to call for a document only in the extreme case of the judgment being impossible on the evidence before it, and does not require additional evidence to be admitted in appeal for the purpose of pronouncing decision in favour of any particular party. Affirming or reversing judgment.

——O. 41, R. 31—Affirming judgment—Contents of.

Whether or not a judgment is according to law must depend on the facts and circumstances of each case. There is firstly the difference which exists between cases of affirmance of judgments and cases of reversal of judgments of the first court. Where the judgment of the first court has fully discussed all the matters placed before it and the appellate court has appreciated the main facts in the case but has dismissed the appeal in a short judgment the appellate judgment is not vitiated by any irregularity. ——O. 41, R. 31—Reversing judgment—Reasons for reversal to be stated.

The Appellate Court in arriving at a conclusion different from that of the first Court should state its reasons for doing, so as to enable the court of second appeal to see whether the conclusion has been legally arrived at. ——O. 41, R. 31—Affirming judgment—How should be made.

Where a Lower Court's judgment is exhaustive and well-written, an Appellate Court, if it confirms that judgment, may express concurrence with it without more, but there should be enough to show that the Court of appeal has considered it fully and formed its own opinion. C. P. CODE (V OF 1908), O. 41, R. 31—Affirming or Reversing judgment.

———O. 41, R. 31—Affirming judgment—Contents of.

Where a judgment of a court of first appeal consisted only of a general statement by the judge that he had carefully considered the record and found no reason to interfere with the conclusions arrived at by the trial Court the judgment is not in accordance with law. The omission of the Court of first hearing to mention a document of obvious importance in its judgment is proof that it failed to consider the document inasmuch as it may be presumed that the document if duly considered would have been mentioned. Where the omission of reference to a document by a first Appellate Court is urged in second appeal as proof that the first Appellate Court failed to consider the document he must either prove that he relied on the document in argument in first appeal or that he relied on the particular part of the judgment of the first Court treating the document as supporting its decision. ——O. 41, R. 33—Amendment— Error in decree— Correction of, by Appellate Court in favour of party not appealing.

Three of four trustees brought a suit for rent against the lessee, the first deft. making the other trustee the second deft. in the suit. The trial judge passed a decree for three-fourths of the rent in favour of the plfs. and a decree in favour of the second deft. for one-fourth less the sum received by him on account. The first deft. alone appealed to the High Court which in dismising his appeal modified the decree of the first court by awarding to the plff. the entire amount and declaring that as to a portion, it was for the second deft.'s share. Held, that the decree of the trial judge was erroneous and the High Court had power to make the decree they did, as the appellant had brought the entire decree on appeal. Where one of several defendants against whom a decree is passed has allowed the period for appealing to elapse, O. 41, R, 22, C. P. C., is not intended to revive his right merely because a co-defendant has instituted an appeal against the plaintiff on entirely different grounds. O. 41, R. 22 (1) in so far as it related to a cross-objection provides for a case where a respondent, although the decree is not entirely in his favour, is content to let the matter rest provided his opponent does not appeal, but who may not be willing to run the risk of having the findings in his favour varied or reversed without an opportunity of appealing against the findings which are adverse to him. The rule should ordinarily be confined to cases of cross-objection urged against the appellant but O. 41, R. 33 gives the Court a wide discretion where justice requires it, that cross-objections against a co-respondent should be heard. 33 Mad. 705, not foll.; 43 Cal. 790; 28 C. ——0. 43, R. 1 (a) and O. 41, R. 23—Order of remand—Appealability.

Per Shadi Lal, C. J. and Martineau, J.—In order to determine whether an order of remand is appealable or not, the test is this: suppose, the Court instead of making an order of remand passed a decree on the strength of the adjudication constituting the order of remand, would there be a second appeal from that decree ? If a second appeal would lie from the decree, the order of remand is appealable, otherwise not.

Per Raoof, J.— An appeal from an order of an Appellate Court remanding a case under O. 41, R. 23, C.P. Code, does lie in all cases except those in which absolutely no right of second appeal against the appellate decree is given in the body of the Code or by any other law. 50 P. An order rejecting a plaint under O. 7, R. 11 is not appealable when such order is based on a question of valuation pure and simple. When the order necessarily involves a decision of the category or class under which a suit falls even though it incidentally decides a question of calculation the order is appealable. In cases where the order involves a question of jurisdiction, the High Court may interfere either under S. 115 of the C.P.C. or under S. 107 of the Govt. of India Act. Before or after an order of remand fructifies by non-compliance into a recorded order of rejection, the Court contemplated in S 12 of the Court Fees Act may, for good and sufficient reasons, review its own order. 7 B. ——0. 43, R. 1 (m), O. 12, R. 6 and O. 23, R. 3—Judgment and decree on admission of defendant—Dismissal of petition—Appeal.

Orders rejecting petitions filed by plff. and defts. by which the plff. prays for judgment against the defts, and the defts. state that they consent to a decree being made against them, are not appealable under the C. P. C. unless such petitions are presented and dealt with in the Court on the footing that they, taken together, amount to a lawful agreement or compromise within R. 3 of O. 23, C. P. C. An order of Court refusing to attach property for disobedience of an interim injunction falls within O. 39, R. 2 (3), C. P. Code, and is open to appeal. 27 I.C. 131 (foll.) (Scott Smith, J.) DIWAN CHAND v. JHARIA COAL CO. 66 I. C. 9 : 1922 Lah. 347.

——O. 43, R. 1 (r) and O. 39, R. 2 (3)—Appeal—Disobedience to injunction—Power of Appellate Court.

An order refusing to attach property for disobedience of an injunction comes under O. 39, R. 2 (3) and is appealable under O. 43, R. 1 (r). The Appellate Court has jurisdiction to pass an order of imprisonment in appeal.

Per Oldfield, J.—Disobedience of an injunction order is an act independent of the suit and calls therefore for a separate punishment.

Per Tyabji, J.—(Dissenting)—O. 43, R. 1 (r) is not sufficient to give the Appellate Court the power which is restricted to the "Court granting the injunction". In other words, no appeal is intended to be given as regards the exercise of a power which is annexed to a specified Court. ——O. 43, R. 1 (s)—Dispossession by Receiver of a third party—Appeal.

When property of a third party is interfered with by an officer of the Court like the Receiver the party has ordinarily two remedies. He may apply to the Court for a summary order restraining the Receiver from interfering or he may ask the leave of the Court to permit him to sue the Receiver and restrain him from interfering and for any other appropriate relief. Where the party has adopted the summary remedy, the order of the Court is an order under O. 40, R. 1 (b) and is appealable. 39 C. 713, 3 Pat. L. J. 573 Rel. C. P. CODE (V OF 1908), O. 43, R. 1 (s).

In an appeal from an order under O. 40, R. 4, C.P.C., directing attachment of the property of a receiver on the ground that he failed to pay the amount directed to be paid by him, it is open to the Receiver to question the amount fixed as due from him by the lower Court. Held, that the Court below erred in law in not fixing the exact amount of the receiver's indebtedness and in directing him to pay an approximate amount.

Observations on the proper procedure to be followed in fixing the amount to be paid by a Receiver and in directing attachment of his property in default of payment. (Krishnan and Venkatasubba Rao, JJ.) R. M. P. PALANIAPPA CHETTI v. M. S. A. PT. PALANIAPPA CHETTY.

Having given every opportunity to a party to prove his objection to a particular item, and then the Commissioner has after hearing the parties recorded his finding it is highly undesirable that he should re-open the enquiry merely because he is invited to do so by the party. The enquiry must be final and if he does re-open the enquiry, it must be on grounds similar to those mentioned in O. 47, R. 1; not because the provisions of O. 47, R. 1 apply to proceedings before him but because that rule affords the best guide in a matter of this kind. to the compromise at the instance of an agent in ignorance of its contents, can either apply for a review of the decree or institute a separate suit for the purpose. The mere fact that an application to set aside the decree is headed as made under S. 151, C. P. C. The expression "where the ground of such appeal is common to the applicant and the appellant" refers to a case where the grounds of appeal and review are the same and does not refer to a comparison between the actual appeal by a party and a possible appeal by the applicant for review. If an appeal by some of the defendants has been summarily dismissed under O. 47, R. 1, an application for review of the judgment appealed against "on the ground of discovery of new and important matters or evidence" should be dismissed if review is sought by the defendants who preferred the appeal but if the other defendants apply, the application is not entertainable as the grounds of appeal are different from the grounds of review and as these defendants could not possibly present their case to the appellate Court as respondents, the appeal being summarily dismissed. The discovery of the ruling of the High Court contrary to another ruling of equal authority of the same High Court on which the Court has passed an order is not a sufficient cause for granting a review, and in such a case the Court has no inherent power to grant it. An application for review of judgment can be granted in part; but when a decree is sought to be set aside on the ground that it was made in favour of a person who at that time had no subsisting title, the entire decree should be set aside. An order passed under an erroneously assumed state of circumstances, is a sufficient ground for review. In dealing with a review application, the Court is not restricted to the grounds mentioned in the application, but it may enlarge those grounds even on an oral application. 9 W. R. 23 (P. C.) Rel. Under O. 47, R. 1, which reproduces S. 623 of the C. P. C., 1882, a party has a right to apply for a review of judgment to the court that has decided the case before an appeal has been preferred. The grounds on which such an application may be made are specifically set forth in R. 1. Where an appeal has been preferred, a review is out of the question and the party's proper course is to apply to the appellate Court, which is in possession of the cases to admit the additional evidence either under the general principles of law or under the specific provisions of R. 27, which lays down that the appellate Court may for any other substantial cause (viz., other than those particularly specified) allow such

The granting of an application for review merely amounts to a decision to rehear the case in which the decree or order (in respect of which a review is claimed) was passed. The judge hearing the review is not entitled to anything in the first stage beyond passing an order granting the review and giving his reasons for so doing. If the review is granted the judge who bas allowed the review becomes vested with jurisdiction to pass any order which the original judge could have passed. It may be sufficient for him merely to alter the order of original judge or it may be necessary for him to take some intermediate step such as an order in remand or referring an issue.

——O. 47, R. 7 (1) (b) and O. 43, R. 1 (u)—Appeal—Review—Grant of—Appeal when lies.

O. 43, R. 1 (u), does not give a general right of appeal but is controlled by order 47, rule 7. The order granting a review application is not appealable merely on the ground that it is not made on satisfactory grounds. The court need not record full grounds for granting review application. ——O. 47, Rr. 8 and 11—Review—Grant of—Appeal—Effect on original decree.

A review commences ordinarily with an ex-parte application. The court then may either reject the application at once or may grant a rule calling on the other side to show cause why the review should not be granted. In the second stage, the rule may either be admitted or rejected and it is obvious that the hearing of this rule may involve to some extent an investigation into the merits. If the rule is discharged then the case ends. If, on the other hand, the rule is made absolute, then the third stage is reached ; the case is reheard on the merits and may result in a repetition of the former decree or in some variation of it. Though, in one respect, the result is the same whether the rule be discharged or on the rehearing the orginal decree be repeated, in law there is a material difference, for in the latter case, the whole matter having been reopened, there is a fresh decree ; in the former case, the parties are relegated to and still rest on the old decree. Consequently the order appropriate to a discharge of the rule is the rejection of the application ; an order so made terminates the second stage of the proceedings, and there is no third stage for the rehearing of the case. When the application for a review is granted, the decree previously made is vacated, with the consequence that an appeal preferred against that decree can no longer be prosecuted. But the parties can appeal from the final decree passed on review. Cases reviewed. (Mookerjee and Rankin, JJ.) GOURKRISHNA SARKA v. NILMADHAB SHA, 73 I. C, 34 : 36 C. L. J. 484 : 1923 C. 113.

Two judges of the Division Bench of the High Court heard an appeal and retired. An application for review was made, admitted and the decree amended. Subsequently the judge was moved to re-hear the case and be made a similar order, which was set aside an appeal on the ground that the Judge as a single Judge could not hear the case, he not being a Division Bench. The Division Bench on hearing the appeal only considered the point involved in the Review and made a similar order against which an application for review was made on the ground tnat the Division Bench ought to have heard the whole case. Held (*Per Sanderson, C. ——— Sch. II, Para. 12—Award partly valid—Effect.

All the matters in dispute between the parties need not be referred to arbitration. Sch. II, Para. 1, C.P.C. provides clearly that where all the parties interested agree that any matter in difference between them shall be referred to arbitration, they may apply to the Court to that effect, while sub-clause 2 provides that the application shall mention the matter desired for reference. It is quite possible that each of the party has his own differences to be settled before an arbitration. The award is valid if the reference is legal and binding. If some portion of the award refers to extraneous matters it can be separated from other portion, provided it does not attack the decision relating to matters of reference. Under the circumstances, the court may modify or correct the award. (Miller, C. J. and Kulwant Sahay, J.) RAGHUNATH SUKUL v. RAM RUP RAUT. 2 Pat. 777 : 1923 Pat. 225 : 76 I. C. 2 : 2 P. A suit by some minors was referred to arbitration which ended in an award in their favour. Before the objections of the defendant were taken up for consideration, on an oral request of the parties, the court set aside the award and referred the matter to the counsel of the parties for fresh arbitration. Held, the award was valid and binding, unless set aside for one of the reasons mentioned in the C. P. Code. The Court ought to have addressed itself to the question whether the next friend of the minors could so compromise the disputes as to give the court no option but to accept the compromise and therefore to preclude the court from considering if it was to the benefit of the minors. ——Sch. II, Para. 15—Misconduct—Not hearing parties.

The ordinary rule is that the enquiry before the arbitrator is assimilated nearly to the proceedings on a trial in the courts. If irregularities in procedure can be proved which would amount to no proper hearing of the matters in dispute there would be misconduct sufficient to vitiate the award without any imputation on the honesty or impartiality of the arbitrator. Therefore if the parties are not informed of any meeting, in the ordinary case that would clearly amount to misconduct on the part of the arbitrators. ——Sch. II, Para. 15—Misconduct-Arbitration—Reference—Dispute as regards management—Scheme—Arbitrators appointing themselves as managers—Propriety of—Delegation of functions.

Where the parties referred a dispute as regards the management of a trust to arbitration the arbitrators instead of deciding the dispute in favour of one or other of the parties appointed themselves into a committee of management Held, that the arbitrators were not themselves the best judges of whether they were fit persons to be members of a committee of management and it was impossible for them to avoid personal considerations when they came to consider the suitability of themselves as members. The award was therefore bad. An arbitrator may delegate to a third person the performance of acts of a ministerial character but this doctrine cannot be invoked to cover a case where evidence was taken in the absence of one or more of the arbitrators. ——Sch. II, Paras. 15 and 8—Award made out of time—Validity—Court competent to set aside.

An award made out of time is not necessarily void; it is only voidable and becomes binding if not sought to be set aside within ten days after it is filed. It is the Court which can extend time under Para. 8 and though its power under it is discretionary, extension of time by agreement of parties, is not negatived thereby. Parties, who acquiese in the making of the award by arbitrators having power to make one even out of time, cannot impeach it on the ground that it was made out of time. ——Sch. II, Paras. 15 (1) (a), 16 and 20—Misconduct—Irregularity—Corruption—Proof—Portion of an award bad—Remainder, if good can be maintained.

If irregularities in the procedure of an arbitrator can be proved which would amount to no proper hearing of the matters in dispute, it is sufficient misconduct to vitiate the award, without any imputation of dishonesty or partiality to the arbitrator. It is desirable that an arbitrator should make and retain for subsequent use, notes of proceedings before him ; but even in their absence an award should not be set aside at the instance of one of the parties who must be held to have known the general course of procedure and who did not make any protest until after the making of the award with the terms of which he was not satisfied. An arbitrator selected by the parties comes within the general obligation of being bound to give evidence, and where a charge of dishonesty or partiality is made, any relevant evidence which he can give is properly admissible. But such evidence cannot be used to scrutinise his decision on matters within his power and on which his decision is final, e.g., to criticise methods adopted by him in determining valuations for purposes of partition. Apart from examining its bearing on the charge of corruption, the Court cannot scrutinise the estimate of value appearing on the face of the award. (Lord Parmoor). AMIR BEGAM v. BADR-UD-DIN HUSAIN ALI.

———Sch. II, Para 15 (1) (a)—Ex parte procedure—Misconduct.

Where an arbitrator takes evidence or hears arguments in the absence of one of the parties without giving due notice of the time and place for the meeting, he is guilty of misconduct. The Court cannot interfere with an arbitrator's decision on the ground that it is incorrect or partial. An award will be set aside at once on the slightest irregularity inconsistent with general principles of equity and good conscience but not for a mere technical irregularity. On a reference through the Court, there was express direction by Court not to consider a certain adjustment between parties. The arbitrator admitted it at the request of one party and under protest by the other. Held, the error prejudiced the case and amounted to misconduct. (Davar, J.) HAJI AHMAD v. ESSAJI TAJBHOY.

———Sch. II. Para. 15 (1) (a)—Refusal to summon witnesses—Arbitratoin and award.

The refusal of an arbitrator to summon witnesses cited by a party does not vitiate the award where there is nothing to show that the arbitrator was not acting within his powers and where in the exercise of a wise and prudent discretion, he declined to summon the witnesses. When a sum is awarded by the arbitrator, the court to which application is made to file the award and pass a decree on it, cannot disallow the sum. If it comes to the conclusion that the party is not legally entitled to the same, it ought to remit the case to the arbitrator. A pleader is not incompetent to be an arbitrator simply because on some occasions he was engaged by one of the parties as his pleader. There is no reason to think that merely on that ground the gentleman appointed as arbitrator will not honestly and fairly determine the suit. ——Sch 1I, Para. 15 (1) (a)--Delivery of award —Power to correct.

After the delivery or publication of the award the arbitrators have no power to correct or alter the same. An irregularity in the course of the reference on the part of the arbitrator will not vitiate the award where the parties knowing of such irregularities, have chosen to waive their objections on that score. An award must be a final decision of all matters requiring determination ; otherwise the award may be completely vitiated except where the arbitrator is empowered to make several awards. In the case of an award pertaining to taking of, and, examining accounts, the accounts should be taken as a whole and not piecemeal, and the rights of the parties determined with reference to the whole. ——Sch. II, Para 15 (1) (a)—Misconduct— Arbitrator taking interest in plff's. case—Fact not disclosed to defendant.

There must be the greatest good faith on the part of the parties in relation to the selection of an arbitrator and every disclosure which might affect the minds of those who are proposing to submit their dispute to the arbitrament of any individual, as regards his selection ought to be made. Where the arbitrator had acted as an adviser of the plaintiff, before the deft. to whom this matter was not disclosed, agreed to refer the dispute to his arbitration, held, that it amounted to misconduct within Para. 15 (1) (a) of. ——Sch. II, Para 15 (1) (a)--Private enquiries without evidence in presence of parties.

An arbitrator must come to his decision on evidence taken in the presence of both the parties or after giving both parties an opportunity of being present at the enquiry. The making of private enquiries by the arbitrator amounts to legal misconduct and is sufficient to vitiate the award. (Chevis and Broadway, JJ.) KANHAIYA LAH v. KHAIRATI LAL. 49 I. C. 303 : 9 P. W. R. 1919.

——Sch. II, Para 15 (1) (a) and (b)—Waiver of objections—Agreement not to object to—Effect of.

Agreement not to object to an award does not preclude parties from objecting on the ground of fraud or bad faith of arbitrators. Where the agreement of arbitration authorised the arbitrators to partition the property in dispute in unequal shares the giving, of a mere life-interest in a small piece of land to one entitled to a "share" is a violation of the agreement and the award is liable to be set aside. If the arbitrators imported their personal knowledge without giving an opportunity of testing such knowledge, it is misconduct on their part. (*Johnstone, C. If the decision of the matter depends on expert knowledge only, the award by an expert arbitrator made on his own expert knowledge is valid. ——Sch. II, Para. 15 (1) (a)—Ex parte proceeding—Effect on award.

Omission by the arbitrators to give notice of their own meeting to a party who has, prior to such meeting, notified to the arbitrator his withdrawal from the submission, does not invalidate the award. ——Sch. II, Para 15 (1) (a)—Ex parte procedure.

Though the Evidence Act does not apply to proceedings before the arbitrators, yet the latter must not receive or act upon evidence or decide upon grounds which would render their award utterly unfair and worthless. An arbitrator can act ex parte in some cases without thereby being guilty of misconduct. There is an implied condition in the submission of the parties to the arbitration that the award shall dispose of all matters referred. Fraud or dishonesty on the part of an arbitrator is not sufficient to render his award a nullity, and does not deprive him of his jurisdiction to make the award ; it merely amounts to misconduct and may afford good cause for the Court to set aside the award. ——Sch. II, Para. 15 (1) (b)—Minor—Arbitration—No representation of minor.

The principles of O. 32, R. 11, apply to references to arbitration made out of Court on behalf of a minor. A minor can sue to set aside an award made at the instance of a guardian who was grossly negligent and acted fraudulently in conducting the proceedings. The award is invalid if the minor who is a party is not properly represented and a Court can set it aside. The Court can refuse to file the award on objection being taken by the minor. The words "or otherwise invalid" in Para 15 are not ejusdem generis with the other cases mentioned therein but are meant to include all cases of invalidity on grounds other than those mentioned. An award cannot be said to be ipso facto invalid because it is not shown to be advantageous or beneficial to the minor. Neither party to an agreement made out of Court to refer to arbitration can revoke it except for good and sufficient cause. But a reference to arbitration directed by Court can be superseded only by an order of court on the ground of misconduct or corruption of the arbitrator, and only after the award has been received, but not during the pendency of proceedings before the arbitrator. An appeal lies against an order setting aside an arbitration as the proceeds amount to a "suit" on which decree should follow. The mere fact that an appellant frames his appeal as an appeal from an order, when the order complained against is really a decree in a suit, does not put him out of Court as it is only a mistake on the part of his legal advisers, 28 I.C. 60 dist. A dispute was referred to arbitration in connection with a pending suit, an award was made, and a decree was passed in accordance with the award under Para. 16 of the second schedule of the Code of Civil Procedure. Where the Court has considered the objections to the award on the merits and come to what the applicant contends is a wrong decision as to whether there had been an irregularity on the part of the arbitrator, it is clear that the case will not come within the provisions of S. 115 and that no revision will lie. It was the clear intention of the legislature that objections to the award on the ground of invalidity from any cause whatsoever should be decided by the Court which had made the order of reference and by no other Court. ——Sch. II, Para 18—Agreement to refer to arbitration after institution of suit—If adjustment within meaning of O. 23, R. 3—Stay of suit

Para. 18 is restricted to cases in which a suit is instituted after an agreement to refer to arbitration. When the Court is seized of a case, its jurisdiction cannot be ousted by the private and secret act of the parties. If they wish to alter the tribunal they must proceed under Sch. II. Paras. 1 to 16. C. P. C. A private agreement between parties to a suit entered into, after institution of the suit to refer their dispute to an arbitrator is not a valid ground for staying the suit. —— Sch. II, Paras. 18 and 20—Award—Institution of suit pending arbitration—Effect of —Power of arbitrators.

If the Court has refused to stay the action or if the defendant has abstained from asking it to do so, the Court has seisin of the dispute and it is by its decision and by its decision alone that the rights of the parties are settled. As soon as the suit is instituted the arbitrators lose their authority. If the defendant still desires that the controversy should be decided by arbitration, he must endeavour to obtain a stay of the suit by an appropriate application under para. 18. If the application is refused by the Court in the exercise of its discretion, the remedy by arbitration ceases to be available. If the suit is stayed, two possible contingencies may require consideration. If the arbitrators have not yet made an award they are free to bring their proceedings to a termination and make an award in accordance with law. If on the other hand the arbitrators have made an award after the institution of the suit, the award cannot be pleaded as an effective bar to the suit. The award so made should be brought up before the Court under para 20 : the Court will refuse to enforce it under para. 21 read with para 14 (c) ; and as the award will thus stand cancelled because made without jurisdiction the arbitrators will be left free thereafter to resume their proceedings on the basis of the original reference. If this view were not adopted, the result would follow that a party to a submission who had appeared throughout and had taken his chance before the arbitrators might at the very last moment, when the award, possibly an adverse award, was about to be made and when there would be no time left for his opponent to obtain a stay order, institute a suit and thereby render infructuous the entire proceedings. Where the defendant did not take recourse to the proper procedure namely, to apply for stay of the suit, cancellation of the award as made without jurisdiction and thereafter remission of the matter to the arbitrators, even if his failure was possibly attributable to ignorance of the law. Held, the agreement to refer to arbitration not having provided for reconstitution of the committee of arbitrators, if one of them should die, the award must be rejected as made without jurisdiction, and the suit should be tried on the merits by the Court. ——Sch. II, Para. 18—Arbitration—Pendency of—Institution of suit—Effect of.

The institution of a suit does not by itself supersede a previous reference to arbitration, dealing with the same subject matter ; but if after the institution of the suit neither party applies for a stay of the hearing of the suit under Sch. II para. 18 either at the time of the settlement of issues or before, such a failure has the effect of superseding the arbitration for good ; and any decision which might be arrived at in that suit would be binding on the parties as if no such reference to arbitration had been made prior to the suit. 41 Mad. 115, 12 A. There is, however, a third contingency, viz, where no application for stay is made within the time allowed by law. ———Sch. II, Para. 20—Jurisdiction—Subject-matter lying within the jurisdiction of two or more Courts—Power of Court to file award.

Per Sadasiva Iyer, J.—Para. 20 was devised for the purpose of enabling any Court having jurisdiction, where the subject-matter of the award lies within more than one jurisdictions, to direct the award to be filed. The Para does not suggest any disability of the kind that arises on a consideration of S. 9 of the Code, provided there is something to arbitrate on, that there is a reference and an award then the policy of the law is that that award should be given effect to, without minute inquiry by the Court. ———Sch. II, Paras. 20 and 21—Award on Private reference—Institution of suit prior to commencement of proceedings by arbitrators—Jurisdiction of arbitrators—Legality of the contract of submission—Enquiry into—Suit to set aside the award—Maintainability.

Where an action has been commenced on a contract containing a provision for reference to an arbitrator of any dispute arising under the contract and is pending, no application to stay the action having been made or such application having been made and refused, an award made by the arbitrator under the provision for reference upon the subject matter of the action, subsequent to the commencement thereof and without the consent of the plaintiff is invalid and will not afford defence to the action. When the same matter comes before two tribunals a public tribunal appointed by the sovereign and, domestic forum chosen by the parties, and no order is made staying the proceedings before the one or the other the public tribunal alone must decide that matter and cannot be hampered by any adjudication by the private tribunal. Neither can that adjudication be pleaded as a bar to the action, nor can it be allowed to affect the merits of the decision given by the public tribunal. The law does not permit the same question to be decided by a court of law as well as by an arbitrator, and it is only when the dispute between the two tribunals is identical that a decision given by the arbitrator must be treated as ultra vires. There is no authority in support of the proposition that an award made after the commencement of an action must be treated as invalid even though the award deals with a question which is not in controversy in the action. 47 C. 752 ; 47 C. 849; 41 M. 115; 56 I. C. P. CODE (V OF 1908), Sch. II, Para 21.

———Sch. II, Para 21—Award—Death of parties pending hearing—Minor representatives not impleaded—Effect of—No prejudice.
The parties to a dispute referred it to arbitration agreeing that they and their heirs would be bound by the award. The adult parties adduced all the oral evidence and filed all the documents before the arbitrators. During the hearing of the arguments it was brought to the notice of the arbitrators that one of the parties had died, thereupon the arbitrators gave time to bring on record the minor representatives of the deceased and for appointment of a guardian. Nothing was done within the time and thereupon the arbitrators gave their award. On an application to the court to file the award, it was objected that the award was not binding because the minors had not been represented in the proceedings. Held that having regard to the terms of the reference and to the fact that the interest of the minor were properly represented by the other parties on record, the award was binding on all the parties. It is true as a general principle that a person who is not a party to or properly represented in any proceedings should not be bound by those proceedings. But proceedings before arbitrators are not intended to be carried on according to the rules of procedure contained in the C. P. Code. If there is a binding reference to arbitration all that is necessary to be seen is that there is a substantial representation of the different interests before the arbitrators. There is no rule of procedure by which the arbitrators could substitute the legal representatives of a deceased party or appoint guardians-ad-litem for infants. If it be held that the arbitrators could not go on with the arbitration if the representatives or some other persons did not chose to come before the arbitrators, the result would be that although the reference would not abate on the death of a party under the law the arbitrators would in fact be unable to make an award and the arbitration would come to an end. The question therefore whether the award given in the absence of the representatives of a deceased party would be binding or not depends on the circumstances of the case. If there has been a substantial representation of the interests of the legal representatives by the other parties on the record and if the enquiry is full and fair, the award will be binding and a decree could be passed thereon. 31 All. 572: 15 C. ———Sch. II. Para 21—Validity of award—Arbitration—Reference—Capacity to make—Executor—Power of appeal from award.

Capacity to make a submission to an arbitrator is co-extensive with capacity to contract and so in the case of persons whose capacity to contract is restricted, the power of making a submission, is in the same manner and to the same extent limited. Consequently, if parties enter into a submission concerning a subject-matter over which one or other has no authority or only a restricted power of disposition, an award ordering such a party to do that which he cannot lawfully do, will have no legal effect whatever. Pure questions of law may be referred for the decision of an arbitrator. As a submission only refers to the arbitrator, questions between the parties, the moment he touches the interest of strangers, he exceeds his authority and his award is void. Submission to an arbitration does not operate as a waiver of an extrinsic objection that the award is illegal because based on an illegal act or subject-matter. The fact that a decree is drawn up on the basis of the judgment which follows the order filing an award in an arbitration without the intervention of the Court cannot take away the right of appeal of the party aggrieved by the order. If the appeal is allowed the decree will become infructuous ; the whole foundation of the decree will disappear and the Appellate Court can declare the decree vacated. An award on a reference made out of Court is bad if it decides questions not referred and leaves questions within the authority undecided. The object of Sch. III, para 11, C.P.C., is to protect the debtor as far as possible from the risk of losing his property wholly or for all time and mere attachment before judgment cannot defeat that object for by such attachment alone the property is not exposed to the risk of such loss. Attachment before judgment is not a process in execution of decree for at the time of attachment there is no decree and no process that could be issued in execution of the same is consequently an attachment before judgment is not prohibited by Sch III, para 11 C.P.Code, 26 C. 531 Ref. Where no such provision is made for the payment of a decree, the mere fact that the Collector is taking steps to satisfy another decree-holder who had attached the same property is no ground for excluding time. 1 N L.R. 180 Dist. ——Sch. III. Para 11—Execution of decree by Collector—Power of debtor to alienate property—Scope of the restriction—Permission of Collector.

While a decree is under execution by the Collector it is illegal for a civil court to issue process against the property and this illegality is not cured by the mere fact that subsequently the Collector ceased to have charge of the execution proceedings. The permission of the Collector for a mortgage by the judgment debtor need not take the form of a certificate under O, 21, R. 83, C. P. Code. It is enough if the Collector knows of the mortgage and gives sanction to it in writing. (Daniels, J. C. and Dalal, A. J. C.) SHEIKH MAHOMED MUZAFFAR ALI v. BHAGWATI PRASAD SINGH. 66 I. The accused, a British subject in Madras, ordered certain goods from Germany before the war, and the goods were received in London by his agent after the outbreak of the war, but before the passing of the 'Ordinance,' The agent sent the goods to the accused after the date of the Ordinance. Held, Per Curiam, that the offence of 'obtaining' was complete in England, if at all and British Indian Courts had no jurisdiction to try the same. Per Wallis, C. J. That the goods were ordered before the war though received after the Ordinance, and therefore there was no 'obtaining' of the goods after the war. Per Wallis, C.J. (Coutts Trotter, J.Dubitante). 'Obtaining' in the proclamation is used in its ordinary sense and includes procuring or ordering the goods from an enemy as well as taking delivery of them on arrival and if the goods had been ordered before the date of the Ordinance, it is no offence to take delivery of them after that date as a person cannot be charged with obtaining goods from himself or of obtaining them twice. Once a person is charged with an offence under the Ordinance, the High Court will not convert the charge into one under common Law as it stood before the Ordinance. The Ordinance VI of 1914 is not retrospective and does not penalise acts done before its date of operation. (Wallis, C. J. and Coutts Trotter, J.) FREDERICK EDMED HOOPER v. KING-EMPEROR.

COMPANIES ACT (VI OF 1882).

——— S. 28—Transfer of shares—Registration—Necessity for.

Every share-holder in a company has an absolute right to transfer his share to another and the transfer is complete on the day the deed is signed by both parties. The provision in the Articles of Association that no transfer would be valid and recognised unless registered in the books and that the company could refuse to register a transferree without assigning reasons is one for the protection of the company and does not prevent the passing of title. ——— S. 169—Limitation—Application to set aside exparte order.

S. 169 of the Companies Act is no bar to an application to set aside an exparte order. 16 A. 53 followed. (Piggott and Walsh, JJ) SHAH MUHAMMAD ESHANULLAH v. THE PEOPLES INDUSTRIAL BANK, LTD., ALLAHABAD 9 O. & A. L. R. 477 : 72 I. C. 106 : L. R. 4 A. 154 : 1923 A. 429.

———S. 169—Interpretation—"Notice"—Limitation for appeal—Extension of time.

In connection with the liquidation of a Company an order was passed by the Court on 6—2—1914. The Official Liquidator applied for leave to appeal the same day and got it and on 18—2—1914 gave notice under S. 169 of the Act to the opposite party that the order would be appealed against. The appeal was actually filed on the 20th May, 1914. It was objected that the appeal was time-barred under S. 169 of the Act, held, that the literal construction of S. 169 makes the Act unworkable in practice and that in any event the Official Liquidator having done all he could in reason, to comply with the provisions of the law was entitled to an extension of time under that section. (Walsh and Ryves, JJ.) THE PEOPLES INDUSTRIAL BANK. v. GOVINDAS DUBE. 63 I.C. 607 : 19 A, L. J. 371.

——— S. 169—Appeal—Time for—Delay when excused—Sufficient cause.

The carelessness or ignorance of a Pleader is not a sufficient reason to extend the time fixed by S. 169 of the Companies Act. Appeals under the Indian Companies Act 1882 ought to be filed with such promptitude as to render service of notice upon the respondent possible within three weeks prescribed by S, 169 of the Act, and the Appellate Court will not extend the time for appealing unless the delay is caused either by the conduct of the respondent or by mistake of the officials of the Appellate Court. ——— S. 2—Informal transfer of shares invalid—Transferor remains a contributory.

A transfer of shares if not made according to the requisite formalities by a Director, is not bona fide and hence will not be recognized ; hence a transferor nevertheless remains a contributory if the transfer is made informally. ———Ss. 10, 12 and 14—Alteration of memorandum of association—Revocation of appointment of managing agent—Confirmation by Court.

The only power that the court has to confirm resolutions of a company in regard to an alteration of the memorandum of association is in respect of matters covered by S. 12. The memorandum of association of a company formed for the purpose of carrying on a banking business had a clause appointing a particular person as agent, principal and secretary to the bank and he was given powers to enter into any agreement contract or transaction with other banks or traders. Subsequently by a special resolution, the company purported to alter the clause by removing the agent and applied for confirmation of the special resolution under S. 12 of the Companies Act. Held that the court should not confirm the resolution, Firstly the clause was not one relating to the objects of the Company alterable under S. 12 (1) (a) of the Companies Act as one relating to a detail of management but was a condition under S. 10 of the Act. Secondly even if the clause related to the object of the Company, the Court had a discretion in confirming it and the court did not think it beneficial to the interests of the shareholders to confirm the resolution. ———Ss. 28 and 34—Transfer of shares—Formalities necessity for—Inchoate transfer—Rights of transferee—Discretion of directors in recognising transfer.

A deed of transfer of shares in a company not complying with the formalities prescribed by the Indian Conpanies Act and the Articles of Association of the Company, is invalid as against a person, who has purchased the shares in a sale in execution held under the provisions of the C. P. Code. When the law prescribes a mode of transfer for shares in a limited company, compliance with that mode is necessary before property can pass so as to confer title on the transferee as against third persons. A transfer of shares in a company otherwise than as is provided by the Indian companies Act and the Articles of Asscciation, may confer a right in equity on the transferee to compel the vendor to execute a proper conveyance and the transaction evidenced by transfer can be regarded as an agreement to convey capable of being perfected into an absolute conveyance by compliance with the prescribed formalities. Until then, the transfer is inchoate and transferee cannot claim priority over a court auction purchaser of the shares. (1902) 2 K. B. 427 and 40 Mad. 1134 foll. 31 Bom. 76 not foll.

——S. 32—(1882), Ss. 48 and 50—Liability of Manager.

Person who acts as director or manager of a company cannot refuse in answer to a penalty that be was legally a director or manager. The obligation of a company and its directors and managers to forward to the Registrar, the summary and list specified in S. 48 of the Company's Act does not come to an end on the date on which by default on their part, the penalty begins to accrue. Under the Punjab Government Notification No. 3, dated the 23rd February, 1910, the Registrar of the Joint Stock Company can authorize any person to institute complaints of offences. Therefore a complaint instituted against the accused by a clerk acting under the instructions of the Registrar is good in law. 8 I. C. 190 dist. (Rattigan, J.) TOTA RAM v. EMPEROR

By one resolution three shares were allotted by five directors to three directors Held, that allotment of shares is but a contract and where three shares were allotted by one vote recorded in one resolution the one vote is not divisible into three votes. Because it is really one vote and not three votes and because each of the allotments was not considered separately on its own merits and because each director was interested in the allotments to the other two and probably voted for them in consideration of an allotment to himself. On 27 2-1920 the Standard Aluminium and Brass Works Company Ltd. was registered in Bombay. On 30-3-1921 the statutory meeting of the Company as required by S. 77 of the Companies Act was held. A general meeting was also held on that day. Subsequent to this there was no general meeting held nor was any balance sheet, audited by the auditors of the Company, prepared and read before the Company in a general meeting On the requisition of certain shareholders an extraordinary meeting was held on 29-6-1922. On a complaint being preferred against the directors of the Company for not complying with the requirements of S. 76 of the Companies Act, Held that the directors were guilty of an offence under the section and that the holding of an extraordinary meeting on the requisition of the shareholder was not a sufficient compliance with S. 76. (Macleod, C.J. and Crump, J.) EMPEROR v. NASURBHAI ABDULLABHAI

a clear case is made out, the court will be slow to withdraw from it the decision whether the company's business shall or shall not be carried on. When an application to wind up a company is supported on the ground that the company has suspended business for a whole year, the power granted by the law to the Court to use its discretion while deciding whether such application should be refused or granted, should be exercised only when there is a fair indication that there is no intention to carry on business. If the suspension is satisfactorily accounted for and appears to be due to temporary causes, the order may be refused, Where the firm of managing agents of a company is dissolved, the fact that steps were taken since the dissolution, at extra ordinary general meetings to appoint new managing agents is sufficient to indicate that it is possible to carry on the business of the company and there is no complete deadlock, necessititang the compulsory winding up of the Company. A creditor must file a suit instead of making an application under S. 163 (i) when the company is solvent and there is ground to suppose the existence of a bona fide dispute of the substantial part of the debt, which cannot be called a neglected one. The court has inherent jurisdiction to stay the proceedings amounting to an abuse of its process. A creditor of a company, while two suits of certain claims were pending, filed an application in a court for the sake of winding the company's business. The company applied for its removal on the ground of the abuse of the court process and the ulterior object of the creditor being to force his terms of the settlement on the company. But the application was dismissed with permission to appeal against the order passed under S. 163 (i) under certain terms. Held, (i) the appeal against the order was competent under clause 15, Letters Patent, having regard to the terms of the order giving effect to the judgment. In the case of orders of payment under S. 186 of the Companies Act, the person to apply for the enforcement of an order or decree is the person in whose favour the order or decree has been made or passed.

COMPANIES ACT (VII OF 1913), S. 186.

An assignee or transferee cannot make such an application and until his name has been substituted for that of the person in whose favour the decree or order has been passed or made. Ss 200 and 201 of the Companies Act, must be held to be subject to the special provisions of R. 15 of O. 21 of the C. P. Code. Therefore a transferee of an order under S. 186 of the Companies Act must, in the first instance, apply to the court which made the order. Under S. 150 the court has summary power to direct the contributory to pay all moneys due from him whether as a contributory or in his private capacity, to the company. 'Debt due on a pro-note by contributory' comes under S. 150, Companies Act. The jurisdiction under the Act is permissive and ought not to be refused in the absence of cogent reasons, when a fit case is made out for its exercise. ——S. 186—(1882) S. 150—Debts due from contributory.

Under S. 150, Companies Act, a contributory can be required not only to meet calls made on him, but also to pay debts owing by him to the company, for recovery of which the court is not bound to proceed under S. 150, but may direct the liquidator to sue for it (Shadi Lal, J.) KAMTA PRASAD v. INDUSTRIAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD. 59 P. ——S. 186. (1)—Time-Barred debt—Cannot be enforced against contributory.

S. 186 of the Companies Act does not override the provisions of the Limitation Act and does not enable the court to enforce by a summary order the payment of a debt which it could not have enforced in an action at law. The section does not create new liabilities or confer new rights. It merely provides a summary procedure for enforcing existing legal liabilities. The words "at any time" can only mean at any time in the course of liquidation proceedings commencing from the date of the winding up order. The section creates a new machinery for bringing in debts due by a contributory to the company and nothing more. S. 214 applies to the conduct of the Director as such and anything done by him during that period in his capacity as a debtor cannot be made a ground of liability under the section. A Director is n t a trustee of loans advanced by a company before his acceptance of office, as such. On an application under S. 214, the Liquidator sought to make an ex-Director liable on the ground that he did not at the time of his appointment as Director, disclose his indebtedness to the company, held, that it was the duty of the applicant to satisfy the court that loss or damage resulted to the company from the alleged non-disclosure. ——Ss. 284 and 171—Winding-up under former Act—Application for leave of court for suit against company—Procedure.

An order for the voluntary winding-up of a company was passed before the commencement of Act VII of 1913. In the course of the winding-up, the Official Liquidator sued A for the balance due from him on account of the price of the shares purchased by him, and obtained an exparte decree. In 1918 A instituted a suit against the company contesting his liability for the said balance. An objection was taken to the maintainability of the suit on the ground that the leave of the court required by the Companies Act for instituting the suit had not been obtained. Thereupon A applied in 1919, to the High Court under S. 171 of Act VII of 1913 for leave to proceed with the suit. Held, that under S. 284 of Act VII of 1913 the application for leave of the court in respect of the suit was governed by S. 156 of the Act VI of 1882 and not by S. 171 of Act VII of 1913 and did not therefore lie in the High Court. ——S. 284—Winding up commenced before new Act came into force—Procedure is that under the old Act.

When proceedings in winding up were commenced Act VII of 1913 came into force. S. 284 lays down that for all purposes connected with the winding up, the old Act should be regarded as in force. An appeal against the order of the District Judge must be filed and notice served in such a case within 3 weeks of the order as laid down in S 169 of the old Act. ——S. 284—Pending proceedings, if affected by new Act.

The plain and rational meaning of S. 284 is that the new Act operates on proceedings arising out of the windings up which commenced after its enforcement (i. e. April 1, 1914) and that no part of the Act applies to pending liquidations. (Shadi Lal. J.) DAULAT RAI v. WAZIR CHAND.

——Ss 284 and 202—Appeal—Notice not served in three weeks—Second appeal—Procedure—Old Law.

Section 284 of the Companies Act (VII of 1913) expressly provides that the old Act shall be deemed to remain in force in respect of pending proceedings. An appeal to the Divisional Judge was dismissed under Section 169 of the old Act because notices of appeals were not served upon the respondent within three weeks from the date of order of the District Judge. Held, no second appeal lay from the order of the Appellate Court.

Courts do not generally interfere with internal management of a company at the instance of a member unless there is something illegal, oppressive fraudulent, or ultra vires on the part of the company, An individual shareholder of a company is not competent to make use of the name of the company as plaintiff in an action and the rule is similar with regard to a number of share-holders. If they institute a suit in the name of the company they must show that they have been authorized by a majority at a general meeting of the company to do so, or that they have exhausted all reasonable means of obtaining the institution of the suit by the company on that the case is one of urgency, in which latter event they institute the suit at their peril and subject to their being able to satisfy the court that they have the support of the majority. ———Effect of—Antecedent rights of parties not to be reopened— Rights enforceable only under compromise.

An application by the widow of the last owner for probate of his will was opposed by the nearest male heir according to the rule of primogeniture which governed the estate. The male heir had also brought a separate suit against the widow for declaration of the invalidity of the will and in this suit the parties entered into a compromise under which the validity of the will was left unascertained but the interests of the parties during their lives were adjusted by consent, and the male heir was to be the absolute owner and occupy the Gaddi on the death of the widow. After the compromise the will was admitted to probate. Held, that the question whether the property went to the male heir with or without the incident of impartibility depended on the construction of the compromise and not upon the validity or otherwise of the will—the very thing which the agreement of compromise was made to avoid. The impartibility of the estate having been preserved by the compromise, the rights of the heir were not affected by the subsequent grant of probate of the will. The payment was not made within due date which was, October 4, 1917; but it was made on the November 26, 1917, the defendant contended that as the payment was not made within time he had become owner of the field :—Held though the plaintiff might have paid the amount decreed within the month allowed he would not have got possession until the February following and that was evidently the important date considered by the court and by the parties when they arranged the compromise and therefore, the field should not be allowed to be forfeited. ———Mislaken view of law.

A compromise of a disputed title or a doubtful right is not rendered invalid because it proceeds on a wrong legal ground. The justification for the compromise is that the parties do not know what the courts will ultimately decide and prefer to settle the matter amicably and avoid the expense of further litigation. If a compromise could be attacked on the ground that if the issue had gone to trial the court would have decided it differently, the whole object of the agreement would be defeated and no compromise would be safe from attack. ———Inchoate — Actings of the parties—Estoppel.

Even where a compromise or settlement is considered to be defective or inchoate and insufficient to make a final and validly concluded agreement, the subsequent acts of the parties may be such as to supply all defects. In fact, when the actings and conduct of the parties are founded upon it, as in the case of a part performance of an agreement, the locus penitentiae which exists in a situation where the parties started upon nothing but an engagement which is not final or complete is excluded, for equity will, support a transaction, clothed imperfectly. in those legal forms to which finality attaches after the bargain has been acted upon. ———Execution beyond time allowed by the decree is barred—Time of essence—Varying terms.

It cannot be laid down in the hard and fast way as being a universal proposition capable of no explanation or deviation, that a consent decree differs from a contract in asmuch as its terms can never be varied except by consent. On January 29, 1920, the parties arrived at the compromise in question. There was a provision in that compromise for the payment by the defendant of a certain sum of money and the building of a new wall within two months from the date of that compromise. Admittedly the money was not paid nor the wall built within the two months. Nothing was done by either party until the defendant took out the execution. There was no evidence at all of any intervening acts of the parties after the date of the decree. There was therefore, a lapse of time of just over one year from the date fixed by the compromise for the performance of the acts. Held : That time was the essence of the contract ; the defendant was out of Court because he was a year out of time and no waiver or a new agreement had been shown to have taken place. But supposing time was not of essence of the contract the defendant could not even then, after an unexplained delay of one year obtain specific

Where a compromise decree providing for payment of money on a prescribed date and in case of failure the forfeiture is to result, courts should consider in each case whether time was of the essence of the transaction and if relief against forfeiture should be given or not. Where therefore the respondent cut down certain trees on the land and appropriated them to his own use then he was acting in breach of the obligation he was under by reason of the decree and was in fact committing a breach of trust. ——Parliament—Membership of—Disqualification — Contract with Secretary of State for India.

A member of Parliament is disabled from sitting and voting in the House, if he or his firm (of which he is a partner) makes contracts with the Secretary of State for India in Council for or on account of the public service of the Crown in India. When the first section of the Act of Parliament, 1782 (22 Geo. II, Ch. 45) after enumerating several office holders proceed to add the words 'any other person or persons whatever' the doctrine of ejusdem generis applies. Any other person means any one who holds an office in the British Government of a similar kind to those enumerated. The 'public service' required by the Act need not be one either executed or requited within Great Britain or paid for out of any particular fund. The fourth section of 41 Geo. III, Ch. 52, passed in 1801 is not a surplussage. It enlarged the area of disqualification. (Lord Chancellor.) SIR STUART SAMUEL, In the matter of, ——Criticism in newspaper -Imputing judicial dishonesty is contempt.

Where the articles as a whole would leave on the mind of an ordinary reader the clear impression that injustice had been deliberately done on political grounds to some of the accused who were apparently, innocent, in other words, it attributes judicial dishonesty to the Judges. Held, such an article constitutes a contempt of Court. The court has to consider the natural and probable effect of the article and not only the intention of the editor. Any unfair criticism of Courts or Judges constitutes such an interference with the administration of justice as should be punished. The tendency of such criticism is to undermine the dignity of the Court and in the end to embarrass the administration of justice. The High Court will not act so much to protect the dignity of its Judges, as in the interest of the administration of justice (1899) A. C. 549 ; (1900) 2 Q. B. 33 ; 33 Bom. 240 Foll. (*Shah, A. C. In matters of contempt the court acts not to defend the dignity of any Court or Judge but to safeguard the proper administration of justice and to ensure that the confidence of the public in that administration shall not be in any way impaired. ———News paper comment—Contempt of lower court—Jurisdiction of High Court to take action in respect of.

The opponent, the editor of a weekly newspaper issued at Dharwar, published an article commenting on certain proceedings in the Court of the First Class Magistrate at Dharwar. The comments attributed partiality to the Magistrate in favour of the prosecution, criticised the proceedings in his Court in an unfair manner, and suggested that he acted under the instructions of the District Magistrate and not in accordance with his own conscience. The Government of Bombay applied to the High Court for a rule calling upon the opponent to show cause why he should not be committed for contempt of Court in respect of the publication of the article. At the hearing of the rule the opponent raised a preliminary objection that the High Court had no jurisdiction to deal with the contempt of inferior Criminal Courts. Held, that the comments constituted a contempt of the Magistrate's Court, that the publication of the article constituted also a contempt of the High Court as tending to impede the due administration of justice and that, therefore, the opponent was liable to be dealt with by the HighCourt. Per Macleod, C. J.—The High Court possesses the same powers of punishing for contempt as the Court of the King's Bench Division by virtue of the Common Law of England. Per Shah, J.—The High Court has no power to punish for contempt of Criminal Courts subordinate to it. It is difficult to hold that because a contempt of Court is punishable under the English Common Law it is punishable as such in India even though the Indian Law does not make it punishable. It would be in effect creating a new offence to hold that a contempt of a subordinate Court as such is punishable. The High Court has no powers with reference to the contempts of other Courts similar to those of the King's Bench in England, which it exercises under the Common Law of England. It has no powers such as the Court of King's Bench in England as being the custos morum of all the subjects of the realm under the Common Law of the land. The mere fact that the High Court has powers of superintendence over the subordinate courts does not give to it any such jurisdiction. (*Macleod, C. ———Pending case—Comments by paper likely to prejudice trial—Punishment.

To make comments on a pending case, when the comments have the effect of prejudicing the fair trial of an accused person amounts to contempt of Court. When during the pendency of a trial on a serious charge the whole thing is treated by a journalist as a humorous event on which the public are invited to laugh, it is a matter that must be dealt with seriously. The power of committing a citizen or a journalist to jail or of inflicting a fine or punishing him in any other way, such as, making him pay costs, should be exercised with the greatest caution. Contempt matters are matters not between the parties but are matters between the respondents and the Court can accept an apology which it considers sufficient. (Davar, J.) CLARIDGE, In re.

13 Cr. L, J. 461 : 15 I. C. 93 : 14 Bom L. R, 231.

———What is—Newspaper article—Power of High Court.

Contempt of Court by a speech or writing may be (1) by scandalizing the Court itself or (2) by abusing parties to an action or (3) by prejudicing the public in favour of or against a party before the cause is heard. Proceedings for contempt by scandalizing the Courts are never obsolete. Contempt of Court is of two kinds, Civil contempt and criminal contempt. A criminal contempt is conduct that is directed against the dignity and authority of the Court. A civil contempt is a failure to carry out the orders of the Civil Court. The primary purpose in a criminal contempt is the vindication of public authority by the punishment of an Act directed against the Majesty of the law, and the proceedings conform as nearly as possible to proceedings in criminal cases, while contempt in civil cases is at the instance of a private party. The nature of proceedings in a civil contempt is civil in the beginning and criminal in the end.

CONTEMPT.

A proceeding for contempt has the essential qualities of a criminal proceeding. High Courts in India are Courts of Record and have summary powers of punishment for contempt combined against the Court or the judges when the Court is not sitting. The printer and publisher of a newspaper is liable for contempt even though he was not aware of the subject-matter constituting such contempt. The question whether Directors of a Newspaper Limited Company are responsible for the contemptuous articles appearing in their paper is a question of fact, and it cannot be held as a rule of law that they are responsible In cases of contempt of Court, the question is not whether the articles did in fact obstruct but whether they are calculated to obstruct or interfere with the due course of justice. In ascertaining the meaning of articles and the intention with which they are used, the Courts will give the words their natural meaning and put a fair interpretation on the language used. Mere disclaimer on the part of the publisher about the intentional disrespect is not a good defence, when the purpose and intention of the articles and their meaning is obviously of a contrary import. (Sanderson, C.J., Woodroffe, Mookerjee, Chitty and Fletcher, JJ.) TARIK KANTI BISWAS, In the matter of. 45 Cal. 169 : 26 C. L. J. 459 : 19 Cr. L. J. 530 : 45 I. C. 338 : 21 C. W. N. 1161 (F. B.).

———Summary proceedings — High Court—Demonstration against a Judge—Advertisement.

The High Court has power to take proceedings for contempt of Court whether the contempt is committed in the Court during the pendency of a proceeding or not. The mere offer of an apology does not entitle a person accused of contempt to be discharged. To say that the sentence is 'Cruel' may be contempt but it would not be a contempt if it were said that the sentence is severe; advertisement in a newspaper for demonstration against a judge is contempt of Court but not so, if it were published for obtaining an expression of public opinion. (Peacock, C. J. and Macpherson, J.) BANKS AND FENWICK, In the matter of, 19 Cr, L. J. 449 : 45 I. C. 113 : 26 C. L. J. 401.

——What is—Duty of Court—Court of Record—Power to commit—Procedure—Libel—Liability of author, printer and publisher—Commitment for contempt—Jurisdiction.

Courts of justice ought to preserve their proceedings from being misrepresented ; and the minds of the public should not be prejudiced against persons concerned as parties in causes before the cause is finally heard. The misrepresentation need not be wilful. To charge a judge with tyranny in the mode of disposing the cases or to cast unjust and defamatory imputations on a judge, without foundation constitutes gross contempt. In the case of a libel the Court has no cognizance, unless it is a contempt, by being an abuse of its proceedings. A Court of record has power to punish by commitment for contempt, a libel published while the Court is not sitting. A printer and publisher of a newspaper is as much liable to be punished for contempt as the author who sent the libellous writing to the printer's office. The printer of a newspaper who publishes with the name of the author attached to it is responsible, if he cannot, when required, prove that it was published with the authority of the person by whom it purports to have been signed. If a printer publishes defamatory and contemptuous libels sent to him for publication by a person beyond the jurisdiction of the Court or if a printer refuses to give the name of the real author of the libel, his case is different from that of the printer who apologises and gives the name of the author. The High Court can proceed for contempt in two ways: (1) by a rule calling upon the guilty person to show cause why he should not be adjudged guilty of contempt of the Court : (2) by attachment. An attachment is a process that issues at the discretion of the judges of a Court of Record against a person for some contempt for which he is to be committed, and may be awarded, by them upon a bare suggestion, or on their own knowledge without any appeal, indictment or information (Peacock, C. J. and Mitter, J.) WILLIAM TAYLOR, In the matter of, 19 Cr. L. J. 402 : 44 I. C. 930 : 26 C. L. J. 345.

———Injunction—Breach of—Firm—Liability of servants.

Neither the assistants nor the agents and servants of a firm are liable to be punished for contempt of Court for disobeying an injunction granted by the Court restraining the firm from dealing in any manner with the goods mentioned in the injunction if no mention is made in the injunction of the assistants or the servants or the agents of the firm. ———Criminal offence—Comment of pending case—Proof by legal evidence—Statement on information and belief.

A contempt of Court for making comments in a newspaper on a pending case is a criminal offence, and no one can be punished for it unless that offence is proved by legal evidence. The conviction of the accused with the articles impugned must be proved by legal evidence. A statement on information and belief is not legal evidence in such a case. 5 Moo. P. C. 111 Ref. ———C.I.F. Terms—Bill of exchange presented with shipping documents—Outbreak of war—Arrest of ship as prize—Bill presented without shipping documents

Ordinarily a seller on C.I.F. terms is entitled to be prepaid by his buyer on presentation to the latter of valid and legal shipping documents. On July 16, 1914, the first consignment of goods ordered by defendants was shipped on board SS. Barenfels and the second on SS. Kybfels on the 25th from a German port. The plaintiff drew against the defendants for the first shipment ; the bill of exchange was presented to the defendants along with the shipping documents and on July 31, 1914, was accepted by the defendants. The plaintiff on August 9, 1914, drew a bill of exchange as regards the second shipment ; it was presented to the defendants who accepted it on November 10, 1914. Both bills were not honoured on due dates of payment. Owing to the outbreak of war SS. Barenfels was seized as a prize but she was allowed to finish her voyage, when on June 8, 1915, she delivered the defendants shipment at Madras. The defendants accepted the cargo and paid the amount of the first bill. The plaintiff sued to recover interest from the defendants on the amount of the first bill from its maturity to the date of payment and for the amount due on the second bill with interest. Held, (1) that as regards the first bill the defendants obtained all that they could obtain under the C. I. F. contract when the bill was presented to them for acceptance, that is good shipping documents ; that on their acceptance the risk thereafter was entirely their own and they were not entitled to refuse payment on maturity and that having refused payment on maturity they were liable for over due interest after that date, (2) that, as regards the second bill as the bill of lading had become a void contract before it was tendered to the defendants on November 10, 1914, there was at the time a failure of consideration for the acceptance of the bill of exchange ; and the defendants were therefore, not bound to pay at maturity. CONTRACT—C. I. F. Terms.

———C. I. F. Terms—Meaning of—Bill of lading—Effect of Royal Proclamation forbidding trading with enemy.

A C.I.F. contract is one under which the purchaser is bound to pay the stated price for the goods on tender of the documents showing that the goods have been shipped for transit to the port of destination, duly insured according to the terms of the contract and that freight has been paid. A bill of lading as known to merchants is a receipt for goods actually delivered over and shipped on board the ship named therein signed by the captain of the steamer or representative and no document which does not conform to these conditions can strictly be called a bill of lading. A C.I.F. purchaser is entitled to ask for a bill of lading for he is not bound to pay upon proof merely that the goods have arrived at the port of departure. A contract with an enemy subject, made before the war, becomes impossible of performance by the Royal Proclamation and the defendant is not liable to pay damages. Certain jute was shipped under a C. I. F. contract on terms that the contract should be held cancelled for goods not arriving. The bills of lading were made to the order of the consignees, but ultimately remained still with the vendors. Held, that the goods still remained the property of the sellers. (*Jenkins, C. ———C.I.F. Terms—Bills of lading to be delivered on payment of price—Property when passes.

When a seller deals with, or claims to retain, the bill of lading in order to secure the price, as when he sends forward the bill of lading with a bill of exchange attached, with directions that the former is not to be delivered to the buyer till acceptance or payment of the bill of exchange the appropriation is not absolute, but until acceptance of the draft, or payment or tender of the price, is conditional only and until then the property in the goods does not pass to the buyer. ———C. I. F. Terms—Mercantile custom—Payment.

When goods have been sold upon C.I.F. terms the contract of the seller is performed by tendering to the buyer the documents which would enable the latter to obtain on the ship's arrival the delivery of the goods contracted for. These documents must of course be tendered within a reasonable time from the date agreed upon for shipment of the goods which they represent. If the contract of sale provides that payment is to be drawn on the buyer, the latter is bound to accept the draft upon tender of the proper documents. This he must do even though the goods be lost or destroyed at the time the draft is presented. The delivery he is entitled to as against payment of the contract price is not the goods contracted for but their symbol represented usually by the bill of lading, charter-party, invoice and policy of insurance. Upon payment he can upon arrival of the ship, demand the goods themselves and should these not be forthcoming, or, when forthcoming, not be of nature contracted for all his remedies at law are then open to him. In a C. I. F. contract for purchase of goods tender by the vendor after the goods had been shipped, of shipping documents including the bills of lading which represent the goods is a good tender and performance by the vendor. The tender of the shipping documents including bills of lading which have been dissolved as contracts of affreightment is not such a tender as the vendors are bound to accept under the contract and the goods are thrown on the vendor's hands. It makes no difference in the application of this rule if the bills of lading were endorsed over to the vendees before the outbreak of the war. (Wallis, C.J. and Spencer, J.) H. Construction.

———Construction.

Where the contract provided that goods are to be delivered as and when same may be delivered from the mills. Held, this should not be construed to mean " if and when the same may be received from the mills." To construe in this way is to convert words, which fix the quantities and times for deliveries by instalments into a condition precedent to the obligation to deliver at all, and virtually make a new contract. The words certainly regulate the manner of performance, but they do not reduce the fixed quantity sold to a mere maximum, or limit the sale to such goods, not exceeding the agreed bales as the Mills might deliver to the defendants during the agreed period. The term 'conditions of sale' in connection with the preparation of bargain paper means 'terms of sale' and not conditions to which the bargain is subject.

Whether an agreement is a completed bargain or merely a provisional arrangement depends on the intention of the parties as deducible from the language used by the parties on the occasion when the negotiations take a concrete shape. As observed by the Lord Chancellor (Lord Cranworth) in Ridgway v. Wallon, 6 H.L. Cas. 289, the fact of a subsequent agreement being prepared may evidence that the previous negotiation did not amount to an agreement, but the mere fact that persons wish to have a formal agreement drawn up does not establish the proposition that they cannot be bound by a previous agreement. to be reclaimed and this would be in progress probably when the works would be commenced and it was stipulated that the plaintiff were not to make any claim for alleged or actual loss of material being washed away during the progress of the work. The plaintiffs were to be paid strictly in accordance with the work when actually done on the sections of the ground, at the completion of the work and no allowance whatever for loss would be entertained for sinking, washing away, etc. The trial judge held that the plans and sections added an implied term to this contract that the defendant, Trust was to supply the protection actually shown on the plans and sections, whilst the Appeal Court was of opinion that the implied covenant was to supply 'adequate protection' the inadequacy being proved by the mere fact of the discrepancy between what they considered the proved wagon loads deposited and the amount measured, Held, that assuming without deciding that the contract had an implied condition, that condition was only to execute the protection as shown on the plans. The rate of payment for work done under a written contract is determined by the terms of the contract, and hence extrinsic evidence as to the rate of payment allowed for such work to another contractor or to same contractor under another contract is irrelevant and inadmissible. Under the terms of the contract in this case the schedule of rates of payment specified under one head a certain rate for carting permanent way material and under another head the rate for carting explosives, and the note referred to in the schedule fixed conditions of carriage of cement and explosives. In an action for damages for breach of warranty, Held, on the true construction of the contract, the contractors could not supply anything they chose, but the supply should be according to the standard set up expressly or impliedly under the contract or at least must be reasonably fit as sleepers of the dimensions prescribed for use by the railway company. The right conferred by the clause amounted merely to the right to determine by and through the skill and experienced persons whom they should necessarily employ for the purpose; acting honestly and impartially according to the best of their judgments whether the goods supplied were in conformity with the requirements of the contract under which they were so supplied. ——Construction—Agreement in writing to sell immoveable property—Condition — Term—agreement amounts to contract.

Held, on the construction of an agreement to sell that the word 'conditions' in the expression the conditions are as follows' meant terms. The plaintiffs who carried on business as dealers of jute in Calcutta, sold some of the bales under what is called 'Home guarantee' to defendants who sold them to merchants in England. 'The Home guarantee' consisted in Calcutta seller guaranteeing the condition weight and the quality of goods at the ports of destination. The London buyer claimed certain allowance on account of inferiority in quality of the goods. Held, that the plaintiffs, who were strangers to the arbitration were not bound by the award and there should be a clear and unambiguous agreement to that effect to make it binding on them. Though it is possible to have the differences between the Calcutta buyer and the seller referred to arbitration in London, the meaning of this clause as to 'Home guarantee' cannot be extended to make an award between a Calcutta and a London purchaser binding on the Calcutta seller. The buyers are also debarred from objecting to goods being shipped prior to the contract." The defendants in their turn agreed to purchase these very goods from plaintiffs and the contract while incorporating by reference the terms of plaintiffs' contract with B and Co., went on to provide "Please note that you have to take delivery of goods as received by us and we are not responsible for the late shipment or non-shipment of the goods or part of the goods." The plaintiffs tendered other goods of similar quality but forming part of some other contract of plaintiffs with B and the defendants wanted better particulars about shipment, etc , before they would accept the goods. Held, that the defendants were bound to take the goods as and when they were received by the plaintiffs without reference to the date of shipment but the defendants were not bound to accept goods relating to other contracts of plaintiffs' with B and Co, even though they are of the same quality mark and quantity. Held, further, that the defendants' letter asking for fuller particulars in the absence of which they declined to accept the goods was not a repudiation of the contract which disentitled them from raising in defence in the suit that the goods were not such as they were bound to accept under their contract. Braithwaite v Foreign Hardwood Co. 2 K.B. 543 *Consorozio v. was no party to it. The rule in Tweedle v. Atkinson (1861) 1.B. and S. 393 is generally applicable to India.

Per the Chief Justice and Kumaraswami Sastri, J. (Bakewell, J. contra). By reason of the assignment, the assignee became bound to hold the demised lands for a further term and the plaintiff became entitled to treat the arrears as money had and received by the assignee to the plaintiff. Per Kumaraswami Sastri, J.—The rule in Tweedle v. Atkinson is not of universal application and is subject to exceptions in India, e.g., persons in whose favour a charge on property is created by contract between third parties, female members of a family who are entitled for maintenance under agreements between other members, etc. Similarly persons who take a benefit under a contract to which they are parties are also subject to the burdens imposed thereby. A jenmi situated as the plaintiff, is in this case entitled to sue on the contract between the assignor and assignee Kanomdar and Melcharathar. (*Wallis, C. J. ———Right to sue—Stranger— Rule— Exception.

A mortgaged his lands to B, part of the consideration therefor, being B's promise to discharge a debt of A to C. Held, that C who was a stranger to the contract cannot sue B for the payment of his debt without joining A as a party. Per curium. The following are some of the circumstances under which a stranger to a contract can sue the promisor : (a) the creation of a trust in favour of the plaintiff in respect of the amount sued for (but a direction to pay, as in the present case, does not of itself create an express or constructive trust, owing to the absence of the elements necessary to constitute a trust); (b) the creation of a change of an immoveable property by the promisor or allocation by the promisor of the specific money in suit in favour of the plaintiff; (c) the creation of a settlement on marriage, in which the plaintiff may de beneficially entitled as provided by Section 23 of the Specific Relief Act; and (d) estoppel as against the promisor, owing to transactions between the plaintiff and the promisor. 3½ All. 410 and 17 C. ———Right to sue—Securing a girl for marriage—Money paid to be given to girl's guardian—Girl not secured—Money recoverable.

Defendant asked for Rs. 200—for the purpose of settling the plaintiff's marriage. The plaintiff however sent only Rs. 175 by money order. Defendant did not spend that sum in connection with the plaintiff's marriage in accordance with the agreement come to and therefore plaintiff sued to get the money back. Plaintiff's pleader stated that girls were scarce and plaintiff wanted the defendant to secure a girl for him and the money was given him to be paid to the guardian of the girl selected, should money be demanded, Shipping.

———Shipping—Carriage by sea—Sweepings.

Where under the terms of the charter party all the sweepings are to be delivered to the charterer, the shipowner cannot apportion them between the charterer and other shippers where the charter party provides that the charterer shall be entitled to all sweepings and shortage occasioned by escape from the bags at the port of discharge. The shipowner cannot evade liability behind a condition in the bill of lading which renders the shipowner immune against loss or damage caused by insufficient packing and torn of fragile bags and say in defence that the shortage was caused by charterer's negligence. ———Shipping—Date of Shipment—Bill of lading.

The ordinary practice is that a bill of lading is not prepared till after the goods have been received on board a ship and bears the same date as that of the mate's receipt. Where the contract is for shipment of the whole lot in February and the bill of lading was dated 28th February, the goods must be presumed to have been actually shipped in February though the ship actually sailed sometime later, and therefore there was no late or improper shipment 'Shipment' is equivalent to 'putting on board.' ——Stranger—Right to enforce—Assignment of all the property of the transferor—Credit of transferor—Suit for recovery of debt from transferee—Maintainability.

Where a person gets a transfer of all the assets of his transferor and subjects himself to the payment of his debts, a creditor of the transferor to whom such a transfer is communicated has a right to proceed against the transferee. A suit by the creditor against the transferee is in such a case not open to the objection that there is not privity of contract between the parties. 41 Cal. 157 : 41 Mad 488 ; 26 Mad. 686 ref. 4 Cal. 897; 8 Cal 79 foll. ——Stranger—Not liable.

No one who is not a party to a contract is liable thereon. (Das, J.) HAMID HASAN v. SHAHZAD KHAN. 52 I. C. 177.

Teji Mundi Contracts.

——Teji Mundi contracts—Nature explained.

In a teji contract, all the formalities of an ordinary contract are observed except that the seller only signs his note and gets an extra amount as consideration for his promise not to offer delivery unless called upon. It is the purchase of an option or right to call for delivery. (Young, J.) DHUNJIDEOSI v. POKERMMALL ANANDROY. 24 I. C. 441 : 7 Bur. L. T. 54.

CONTRACT—Variation.

Variation.

——Variation—Provisions of not to be varied on grounds of inconvenience.

No variation of the contract of parties and the statutory provisions applicable thereto is possible by reason of general considerations or administrative rules which have not the force of an Indian statute. (Lord Shaw.) HAJI BUKSH ILAHI v. DURLAV CHANDRA KAR. 39 Cal. 981: 39 I. A. 177: 16 C. W. N. 842: 23 M. L. J. 206: 12 M. L. T. 385: (1912) M. W. N. 1005 : 16 I. C. 821 (P. C.) : 14 Bom. L. R. 1063 : 10 A. L. J. 452 : 16 C. L. J. 620 : [On appeal from : 13 C. W. N. 633 : 3 I. C. 986: 9 C. L. J. 341.]

——Variation is not extinguished by merely one party alleging that new contract had been substituted in place of old one.

The mere fact that one party alleges that a new contract had been substituted in the place of an old one is not sufficient to put an end to the old contract even as against the party making the allegation. But if the allegation is proved true, the consequence will be different. (Fletcher and Chatterjee, JJ.) KALIDAS BHANGA v. GIRIBALA DASI. 23 I. C. 360.

——Variation—Power to vary terms.

Where one party to a contract is authorized to vary terms, the power should be strictly construed and the indulgent party should not be allowed to travel beyond the plain words of the power. (Seshagiri Aiyar, J.) VENUGOPALA AIYANGAR v. S. I. RAILWAY CO. 62 I. C. 602 : 13 L. W. 309.

——Variation—Novation—Essentials.

The main element in a novation of a contract is that the right against original contractor is relinquished and the liability of the new contracting party accepted, provided that the new contract is legally enforceable. (Das and Admi, JJ.) BARKUARIN ALAK v. SIRCAR BARNARD & CO.

CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872).

———Scope.

See also CONTRACT—CONSTRUCTION.

———Scope of—Not exhaustive.

The Indian Contract Act does not purport to be a complete code dealing with the law relating to contracts, but defines and amends certain parts of that law. (Macleod, J.) SHIVLAL MOTILAL v. BIRDICHAND JIVRAJ.

40 I. C. 194 : 19 Bom. L. R. 370.

———Scope.

The Contract Act is not exhaustive so far as the law relating to common carriers is concerned, but its other provisions dealing with particular branches of law are exhaustive. 30 C. 530 : 18 C. 623 Ref. ———Scope of.

Although the Contract Act purports to deal only 'with certain parts of the law relating to contracts' yet it should be regarded as exhaustive and binding on the Courts in India when it treats a subject in a way at variance with the English Law. ———Ss. 1 and 118—Opposition between custom and contract—Evidence Act, S. 92 Proviso (5).

A mercantile custom obliging the purchaser in contravention of the written terms of a contract to accept goods not of the stipulated kind can be of no avail in a suit for the recovery of goods under the contract, but evidence of custom not in consistent with the contract can be admitted. Per Heaton, J. Where there is reliance on custom there is necessarily a variation from the written contract, but the variation need not be in contradiction of or repugnant to it. (*Scott, C. CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872), S 2.

———S. 2—Offer—Invitation to offer—Quotation of prices.

An offer must be distinguished from an invitation for an offer. A letter from a prospective buyer asking for quotations from a merchant is an invitation for an offer. If the merchant sent his quotations and the buyer accepts them and orders goods that constitutes the proposal, which the seller may or may not accept. ———S. 2—Auction bid—Withdrawal before fall of hammer.

A bid at an auction is nothing more than an offer and can be withdrawn like all other offers before it is accepted by the other party which in the case of an auction is signified by the fall of the hammer. (Coutts-Trotter and Ramesam, JJ.) CHAMPALAL v. JEYGOPAL DAS.

———S. 2 (a) and (b)—Acceptance—Bid—Whether bid may be withdrawn.

Every bid is an offer on the one side which is not binding on the other side till it is assented to. Therefore a bidder may withdraw his bid before the sale has been completed, i.e., before the acceptance of the bid. (Mookerjee and Beachcroft, JJ.) KENARAN v. KAILASH CHANDRA.

19 I. C. 904 : 18 C. L. J. 53.

———S. 2 (a)—Auction bids are mere offers until accepted.

The Tahsildar of Madura acting on behalf of Government held an auction of certain lands in July 1915. The 1st defendant purchased the property at the auction and depositd 15 per cent of the purchase money on the day of sale. There was a stipulation in the conditions of sale that the sale was to be subject to confirmation by the Collector. In spite of several applications by the 1st defendant the sale was not confirmed and the Government cancelled the sale in 1917. Held, that the effect of the 1st defendant's bid at the auction was a mere offer by him which was to be accepted by confirmation of the Collector and that in the absence of such confirmation, there was not a completed contract of sale in favour of the 1st defendant. ——S 2 (a) and (b)—Offer and acceptance—Lowest price telegraphed at request—Broker accepted earnest money on behalf of vendor.

Where a broker negotiating a sale of three properties, telegraphed to the vendor for the lowest price, which was intimated and the broker accepted earnest money in respect of one of them and the vendor repudiated the broker's acceptance. Held, telegraphing lowest price is not tantamount to an offer but a mere intimation for offer. ——S. 2 (b)—Offer by letter—Acceptance in minute—Terms of, partly incorporated therein—Variance between letter and minute.

Where an offer made by R. to the provisional Directors of a company, was, after the company was formed, accepted by it by its minute. Held, that the only binding contract was that contained in the minute, notwithstanding that the latter was defective, inasmuch as it did not incorporate certain material terms set forth in the letter containing the offer. ——S. 2 (b)—Acceptance without knowledge.

Reward, offered for the search of a missing boy, for whose search a servant was already sent, cannot be claimed by the servant though he found the boy out; the servant did not undertake the search after the offer nor on its strength and hence the finding out by him does not amount to acceptance by conduct. If the promisee does some act from which a third person is benefitted which he would not have done but for the promise, the consideration is sufficient. (Mookerjee and Walmsley, JJ.) FANINDRA NARAIN ROY v. KACHHEMAN BIBI. 45 C. 774 : 22 C. W. N. 188 : 41 I. C. 673 : 28 C. L. J. 152.

A compromise is an agreement to put an end to disputes and to terminate or avoid litigation. The real consideration is not the sacrifice of a right but the abandonment of a claim. (Mookerji, J.) UPENDRA NATH v. BINDESHRI PRASAD.
20 C. W. N. 210 : 32 I. C. 468 : 22 C. L. J. 452.

——S. 2 (d)—Agreement to accept lower rent.

Whether an agreement by a landlord on the expiry of the term of a kabuliyat to accept rent at a lower rate than that reserved in the kabuliyat is unenforceable for want of consideration is doubtful. Payment and acceptance of rent at a reduced rate ever since the expiry of a lease (which reserved a higher rent) may be adduced as evidence to show that the parties never intended that the stipulation to pay the full rent was to be acted upon or in the alternative that there had been a waiver. (N. R. Chatterjee and Newbould, JJ.) MANINDRA CHANDRA NANDI v. DURGA SUNDARI DASIA. 32 I. C 185 : 20 C. W. N. 680.

——S. 2 (d)—Release of original debtor a consideration for liability of another.

The release of the original debtor is a good consideration for the undertaking by another to be liable in his place. (Mookerjee and Roe, JJ.) MOHES CHANDRA v. RAJANI KANTA.
31 I. C. 29 : 22 C. L. J. 235.

——S. 2 (d)—Compromise—Consideration—Prior sale.

Held, that as the prior sale was without consideration, forbearance by the vendee to enforce its terms could not be consideration for the subsequent compromise, which was consequently not binding on the plaintiff and the latter was therefore entitled to recover his property. (Scott-Smith, J.) RALU v. PHALLA. 53 I. C. 497 : 137 P. R 1919.

——S. 2 (d)—Consideration.

Where the members of a community, who had rendered some help to the defendant, stipulated for payment by him of a certain sum of money to the community as a whole, and he promised to do so, Held that the promise was for consideration and was enforceable. (Krishnan, J.) BUDAVARAM NARASIMHULU CHETTY v. NOOTA IBBUNDRUM NAGASAM VARU. 44 M. L. J. 240 : (1923) M. W. N. 237 : 72 I. C 95 : 1923 Mad. 434.

——S. 2 (d)—Consideration—Execution of security bond for pre-existing simple debt—Implied forbearance to sue.

A forbearance to sue a debtor on his pro-note is a good consideration for the latter executing a security bond for payment of the debt, and the creditor can enforce the security. An agreement for forbearance need not be for any definite or particular time. It is enough if an implied request for forbearance be inferred. Any detriment suffered by defendant on the faith of the promise of the plaintiff will be sufficient consideration to make the plaintiff's promise enforceable. 14 Cal. 64 and 36 All. 268 Foll. (Seshagiri Aiyar and Napier, JJ.) PERUMAL MUDALIAR v. SENDANATHA MUDALIAR.
44 I. C. 479 : (1918) M. W. N. 173.

——S. 2 (d)—Consideration—Abstention from—Taking legal proceedings.

Where a creditor abstains at the instance of a debtor from taking legal proceedings against an estate which is likely to come into the hands of the former on a future date, that is sufficient consideration for a promisee to pay a debt due to the latter under S. 2 (d). (Wallis, C. J. and Seshagiri Aiyar, J.) LAKSHMANAN CHETTIAR v. BOMMACHI NAICKER. 32 I. C. 416.

——S. 2 (d)—Consideration--Release of claim, when good consideration.

The release of a claim by one person is a consideration for guarantee of payment by another only when that claim is given up and not when there is a mere promise. (Sankaran Nair and Oldfield, JJ.) NAGAPPA v. RAMANATHAN.
(1916) 2 M. W. N. 264 : 29 I. C. 422 : 4 L. W. 553.

——S. 2 (d)—Consideration—Agreement not to appeal if binding.

An agreement not to appeal, the consideration for which is the mutual consent of the parties to refer the matter in dispute to the Court itself is binding on the parties. (Sadasiva Aiyar, J.) In re NIMAGADDU PEDA NAGAMMA. 29 I. C. 355.

——S. 2 (d)—Contract for benefit of third person—Enforcement of, by third person.

An agreement in pursuance of which a member of a Hindu family declines to take share in the family property at a partition on the consideration that the others shall maintain their sister forms a good consideration for the sister to enforce her rights of maintenance against her brothers. 4 M. 137 rel on. (Ayling, J.) PERURI SOMANNA v. GRANDHI MANICKAM. 14 I.C. 517.

——S. 2 (d)—Consideration.

Where one of the terms of a Karar for partition was that the other co-parceners should pay a certain sum for the costs of the marriage of the daughter of one of them and in pursuance thereof pro-notes were executed, the pro-note and the agreement to pay are supported by consideration since it forms one of the terms of the contract. ——S. 2 (d)—Consideration—Pro-note executed in lieu of a previous pro-note.

A pro-note was executed by the defendant in favour of S, wife of the second plaintiff R, on 8th December 1917. It was in renewal of a pro note previously executed by the deft. in favour of R's uncle K, on 16th December 1914. It was executed just before limitation on the earlier pro-note expired. K died childless and made a will in favour of S. It was found that it was at the request of the second plaintiff that the pro-note was renewed in favour of S. Held that the second plaintiff's forbearance to sue on the original instrument is sufficient consideration for the renewal. was failure of consideration on the finding that plaintiff's sister and not the plaintiff engaged teacher for the defendant. (Jwala Prasad, J.) BACHHU RAM v. CHANDER TAWAIJ. 38 I. C. 230.

——S. 2 (d)—Forbearance to sue.

A pro-note was executed by five persons in consideration of old debts incurred by only three of them. On a suit on the pro-note the other two signatories pleaded denial of receipt of any consideration. Held, that the two contesting defendants being closely related to the actual debtors, creditor's forbearance to sue the latter was sufficient consideration for their promise. (Twomey, J.) MG. KYA YEIT v. KARUPAN CHETTY.
11 I. C. 773 : 4 Bur. L. T. 156.

——S. 2 (h)—Representation in contracts of fact and future intention.

A representation of fact is a contract and the party misrepresenting is bound to make good the representation. A representation of future intention at best is only a contract and can only be proved as a contract. (Beaman, J.) LADKABAI v. NAVIVAHU. 31 I. C. 708 : 17 Bom. L. R. 783.

——S. 3—Contract—Completion of—Evidence.

In a suit by A for damages for non-delivery of goods by B the latter pleaded that there was no completed contract. B had accepted a deposit of earnest money from A and did not reply to a letter from A's pleader demanding specific performance. Held, there was evidence of a completed contract. (Sir John Edge) BANARSI DAS v. BANSI LAL. 16 I. C. 75 (P.C.).

Though a contract implies two parties, a contract in writing does not require the signature of both parties, hence a bond executed and delivered by one party which is accepted by another is a contract in writing. (Mookerjee and Chatterjee, JJ.) CHALIAPHROO v. BANGA BEHARI SEN.

——Ss. 3 and 7—Acceptance, place of.

When the proposal and acceptance are made by means of letters the contract must be deemed to have been made at the place where the letter of acceptance is posted. Where the customers could have no control over the goods until they had paid the price at Amritsar and had thus obtained the railway receipt, and endorsement in their favour and though the railway would be deemed to take delivery at Calcutta on behalf of the customers of goods despatched from there and consigned to the customers ; it is not easy to see how the railway could take delivery on behalf of the customers of goods which were not consigned to the latter and not in any way under their control. But where it must have been understood between the parties that the goods should be delivered and paid for at Amritsar, the cause of action arose at Amritsar. ——S. 8—Contract—Conditional proposal—Agreement to bequeath village—Performance of condition.

The plaintiff was brought up since her childhood by her widowed aunt, who got her married in 1886 to a suitable zemindar at her own expense. At the time of the marriage the aunt promised that, if the plaintiff and her husband would reside with her, she (the aunt) would purchase and settle property on the plaintiff. The plaintiff and her husband accordingly resided with the aunt. In 1893 the aunt purchased a village, Repudi, in her own name, but ultimately to be for the benefit of plaintiff. Owing to the dissatisfaction arising from the aunt's omission to transfer the property to plaintiff, her husband ceased to reside with the aunt. The aunt thereupon in October 1893 wrote to the plaintiff stating that the village had been purchased only for the plaintiff and would be duly transferred to her on the death of the aunt. The plaintiff and her husband thereupon resided with the aunt till her death in 1899.

Held, that the letter of 1893, coupled with the conduct of the plaintiff constituted a binding contract by the aunt to give the village to the plaintiff. The letter was a proposal with a condition

The test of soundness of mind under S. 12 of the Contract Act is that the contractor or donor is capable of understanding the business and of forming a rational judgment as to its effect upon his interest. There being a presumption in favour of sanity, the person who relies on the unsoundness of mind must prove it sufficiently to satisfy this test. Mere weakness of mind is not sufficient as laid down in 27 A. 1 (P. C.) Although it is not necessary to prove utter mental darkness or congenital idiocy, there must be proof that the donor or contractor was incapable of understanding business, and forming rational judgment as to its effect. Even if occasional aberrations are proved, they would not vitiate transactions not entered into under their influence. (Jwala Prasad and Adami, JJ.) MAHOMED YAKUB v. ABDUL QUDDUS.

A threat even from a third person amounts to coercion under S. 15 of the Act. The law of Duress of English Common Law is not applicable in India, as the law laid down in S. 15 is other than that contained in English Law texts ; in order to establish coercion, a person must prove (1) the utterance of threat ; (2) of an act forbidden by Penal Code, (3) with the intention of compelling the plaintiff to make the agreement complained of. Mere threat of bringing a criminal charge does not amount to coercion as defined in the Act, as it is not per se forbidden by Penal Code. Where undue influence is alleged it is necessary to examine very closely all the circumstances of the case. Where a deed of gift by a pardanashin lady is impeached on the ground of undue influence the questions that arise are (1) was the transaction a righteous transaction, i.e., was it a thing which a right minded person might be required to do ? (2) was it an improvident Act, (3) was it a matter requiring advise ? (4) did the intention of making the fact originate with the donor ? Where the relation between the parties is such that one of them is in a position to influence the other and the bargain is with the influencer and in itself unconscionable then, the person in a position to use his dominating power has the burden thrown on him of establishing affirmatively that no domination was practiced so as to bring about the transaction, but that the grantor of the deed was scrupulously kept separately advised in the independence of a free agent. 43 Mad. 546 ; 18 Cal. 545 ref. CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872), S. 16—Essentials.

Essentials.

——Ss. 16 (1) and (3) and 19-A—Essentials—Avoidance of contract—Undue influence—Onus—Conspiracy.

To avoid a contract under S. 16 of the Contract Act a party has to establish not only that the other party was in a position to dominate his will but he must also prove that the other party has used that position to obtain an unfair advantage over him. Under S. 16 sub-section (3) if the transaction is unconscionable, the burden of proving that the contract was not induced by undue influence is thrown on the person who was in a dominating position. He must establish affirmatively that no domination was practised so as to bring about the transaction, but that the granter of the deed was scrupulously kept separately advised in the independence of a free agent. In the category of cases of undue influence might be covered cases where the party to a transaction exercised that influence in conspiracy with or through the agency of others. (Lord Shaw). ——S. 16—Essentials—Plea of—Proof—Need of money—High rate of interest.

To establish a plea of undue influence it must be shown that plff. (mortgagee) was in a position to dominate the will of the defendants (mortgagors) and secondly that he used that position to obtain an unfair advantage. If the terms of the contract appear on the face of them to be unconscionable or are shown to be so, the second point may be presumed. Urge it need of money on the part of the borrower is not in itself sufficient to place the lender in a position to dominate his will. (*Daniels, J. C. and Dalal, A. J. The fact that the prosecutor was ready to compound an offence of which the executant was charged with and to withdraw the charge if a kabuliyat was executed and the accused was ready to execute the kabuliyat on condition of the withdrawal of the charge would not necessarily lead to the inference that one of the party was in a position to dominate the will of the executant and that he used the position to obtain an unfair advantage over him. It is difficult for a Court of justice to give relief on grounds of simple hardship in the absence of any evidence to show that the money-lender had unduly taken advantage of his position even when the transaction appeared to be undoubtedly improvident. High rate of interest.

———Ss. 16 and 19—High rate of interest—Undue influence—Unconscionable contract.

The power of the Court to interfere with contracts alleged to be unconscionable or brought about under undue influence is limited by Ss. 16 and 19 (a) and before any presumption can be drawn that the contract was such it must be shown that the lender was in a position to dominate the will of the borrower. Mere high rate of interest is not sufficient. (Stanley, C. J. and Griffin, J.) GANESA LAL v. MANDE LAL. 10 I. C. 249.

———Ss. 16 and 74—High rate of interest—Unconscionable bargain.

Where in a mortgage interest is stipulated at the rate of 24 per cent. in the absence of coercion or undue influence, there is no reason why the rate of interest stipulated should not be allowed. The law relating to hard and unconscionable transactions has been codified in the Contract Act. A Court cannot go outside the statutory provisions and follow some rules or supposed rules that have been applied in certain cases by the Courts of Equity in England. ———Ss. 16 and 74—High rate of interest—Hardship—Mortgage.

The fact that the borrower failed to realise what the rate of compound interest would work out in a few years or that he entered into an improvident bargain (unless it is an unconscionable one) would not entitle him to relief from a court of justice on the ground of hardship. It would be otherwise if the contract was brought about by undue influence. (Chatterjee and Panton, JJ.) HARENDRA KUMAR ROY v. DABENDRA KUMAR DAS. 54 I. C. 558.

———Ss. 16 and 74—High rate of interest—Power of court to reduce.

An agreement to pay interest at a stipulated rate does not become unconscionable though there is a stipulation to pay compound interest at the same rate on default in the payment of the simple interest. The lender may secure for himself compound interest after the borrower has for a considerable time neglected to pay the debt or the interest accruing due upon it which he has contracted to pay. It is not a universal proposition of law that wherever there is a security for the debt a rate of interest over ten per cent. per annum is penal. Where a certain rate of interest is excessive or not is a question which must depend upon the particular circumstances of each case and a rate of interest at 15 per cent per annum compoundable every year is not sufficient to raise the presumption that undue influence was exerted by the mortgagee on the mortgagor in obtaining the mortgage, 42 C. 690; 18 A. ——Ss. 16 and 74—High rate of interest—Penally—Relief against.

The rate of interest, however exorbitant, cannot be abrogated unless the agreement was tainted by undue influence, fraud or misrepresentation such as are mentioned in the Contract Act. A solemn agreement duly and freely entered cannot be allowed to avoid the terms theroof which they agree to with their eyes open and with no restraint upon their freedom of will. Upon this principle, contracts for payments of exorbitant rates of interest, such as, 75 per cent. in some cases were upheld and were not allowed to be disturbed ; but in those cases the contracts were upheld against the party to the contract being allowed to trip up the terms of the contract when he agreed to them voluntarily and with his eyes open. A high rate of interest cannot always be regarded objectionable as a penalty within S. 74. But when the contract provides a special condition for a change in the rate or mode of calculation of interest as a punishment for some default, that special condition is a penalty. Proof.

——S. 16—Proof — Undue influence—Proof—Deed prejudicial to donor.

A deed cannot be treated as void for undue influence merely because it is unreasonable or its terms are prejudicial to the donor. Undue influence is not a matter always capable of direct proof, and must depend in its very nature, on the conclusions to be drawn from the entire circumstances in which the transaction had its origin. Reference must be to the opportunities for and disposition to the exercise of influence on the one side and the result of its exercise as indicated by the merits of the transactions. ——Ss. 16 and 74—Unconscionable bargain—Excessive interest, when penalty—Relief against.

The Courts have ample power under the amended Contract Act to go behind hard and unconscionable bargains on the ground that where there is ample security, the exaction of excessive and usurious interests in itself raises a presumption of undue influence which it requires very little evidence to substantiate. Where there is no security, no rate of interest can be considered excessive. There can be no standard rate on personal loans. Under the amended S. 16, the question of hard and conscionable bargain can only be considered in reference to undue influence. Where the parties are reasonably on terms of equality, a judge cannot do better than adopt what they themselves have agreed upon. ——S. 16—Youth or sex—Pardanashin lady—Mortgage of her house in favour of her husband's creditor—Undue influence—Onus on whom.

A mortgage executed by a pardanashin lady in favour of her husband's creditor, wherein she derived no direct benefit herself, raises a strong presumption of undue influence in the absence of proof that she had been a free agent and duly informed of what she was about ; and the burden of this proof lies on him who claims against the lady. Undue influence might proceed from a third person. (Jenkins, C. J and Chatterjee, J.) BADIATANNESSA BIBI v. AMBICA CHARAN GHOSE, 23 I. C. 401: 18 C. W. N. 1133.

——S. 16—Youth or sex—Undue influence—Old man—Gift of an agent.

Undoubtedly, if a person of competent capacity signs a deed, it is to be presumed that he understood the instrument to which he has fixed his name. The principles of law applicable to a pardanashin woman will not be extended to a man on the ground that he happened to be old and not in robust health. But even in a case where an agent was the object of the bounty of his principal there is nothing to prevent this and if an agent can clearly show that a gift was made in his favour by a donor who was in a position to exercise a free and unfettered judgment with full knowledge of what he was doing, the gift will be upheld. ——S. 19—Repudiation—When allowed.

A person agreeing to lease a house after seeing a plan of it and finding that the house is not according to plan when he comes to occupy it, is justified in repudiating the contract. He can repudiate the contract as soon as misrepresentation is brought to knowledge. The exception to Sec. 19 applies when the contracting party might with due diligence have discovered the misrepresentation before he entered into the contract. (Chevis, J.) ALLAH BAKSH-KHAN v. R. ——Ss. 19 and 23—Fraud—Contract—Avoidance.

The fraud referred to in Ss. 19 and 23 is fraud as defined in S. 17 and does not include the infringement of a condition in a contract to transfer a tenancy, requiring previous consent of the Financial Commissioner to the transfer of a tenancy. The Civil Court is not prevented from enforcing a contract inter partes, which is in itself in no way illegal or fraudulent qua those parties merely because a third person may have a right to refuse to give effect to that contract. ——S. 19—Finding as to—Misrepresentation—Inducing consent—Second Appeal.

Illustration (b) of S. 19 is not exhaustive of the class of cases which could come under the explanation. ——S. 19—Misrepresentation —Nature of—Fact—Opinion—When avoids contract.

To decide whether a statement is a substantive part of a contract or a mere representation, it is essential that the statement should be descriptive of the contract in order to make it a term of the contract. Where one of the parties to a contract says: 'I am well known to the National Bank in your city' it is not a statement of fact but only his own opinion, as to the state of his credit though it may be false. Such a statement is not one of fact and even if false, does not avoid the contract under S. 19 (Sadasiva Aiyar and Napier, JJ.) HOPE PREDHOME & Co. v. EARNEST LOUIS. 29 I. C. 575.

A sale deed which tends to defeat the provisions of the Agra Tenancy Act on the subject of the creation of exproprietary tenancies is void and unenforceable. Where the defendants, the executant of the deed, expressly stipulated that they would surrender actual possession and enjoyment of the Sir and Khudkasht lands in respect of which they became by statute exproprietary tenants from the date of the execution of the deed of sale, such a stipulation is void as being contrary to public policy. Any stipulation by way of penalty, inserted in a sale deed in order to enforce the fulfilment of such a covenant on the part of the vendor is also void and unenforceable. Where the entire clause stipulating for the surrender of the exproprietary tenure and for a penalty in the event of the failure of the vendor to make such a surrender can be wiped out of the document without interfering in any way with the other stipulations, the latter can be enforced. CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872), S. 23—Acts defeating statute.

On a sale of Zemindari, the vendor agreed to relinquish ex-proprietory rights on the vendee paying a certain allowance which was to be a charge on the property sold. The allowance fell into arrears. Held, the arrangement was a mere device to get round the Rent Act, that the contract was void and consequently neither a personal decree nor a decree against the property in the hands of the transferee could be given. ——S. 23—Act defeating statute—Agreement not to partition properties sold—Validity.

A condition in a sale deed that the vendees would not partition the shares purchased without the consent of the vendors is not opposed to public policy as no right is absolutely given up. The vendor merely is entitled to recover damages for the breach of the contract. (Tudball, JJ.) KUER SEN v. SUKH KHO. 27 I. C. 503 : 13 A. L. J. 6.

——S. 23—Act defeating statute—Mortgage—Prohibited by law—Mortgagee not entitled to possession or money.

Transfer of occupancy holdings is prohibited by express provisions of the law and consequently neither possession nor his money can be recovered by the usufructuary mortgagee. 33 A. 779 Dist. (Piggott, J.) RAJWANTI KUNWARI v. DOMAN SINGH. 25 I. C. 182.

A tenant agreed to pay to his Zemindar certain (Rasum Zemindari) dues over and above his usual rent. Held that the contract was against public policy and unenforceable as its intention was to defeat the object of the provisions of Ss. 56 and 86 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act and that the dues were not rent. (Rafique and Piggott, JJ.) SISRAM v. ASHGAR ALI. 35 All. 19 : 16 I. C. 422 : 10 A. L. J. 416.

——S 23—Act defeating statute — Public policy—Speculation in Gold—Notification.

Plaintiff contracted on behalf of the defendant to purchase sovereigns for Vaishakh and Jeth Vaidas of 1918. The defendant failed to make payment and the plaintiff sued the defendant for damage occasioned by breach of the contract. The defendant contended inter alia that the contracts were opposed to public policy and therefore void. Held that the contracts were not bad as contrary to public policy simply because they contravened the provisions of a subsequent notification of the Government of India under the Defence of India Act. Per Hayward J. Dicta of English judges on public policy should be disregarded by judges in India. Public policy should not be interpreted under S. 23 of the Contract Act as comprehending all the political policies from time to time of the Government of India. ——S. 23—Act defeating statute—T. P. Act, S. 6 (h)—Insolvent—Transfer to plaintiff of Hatchita in favour of the insolvent—Hatchita executed by insolvent debtor to plaintiff, suit upon—Consideration—Illegality—Transferability.

A Hatchita in favour of certain insolvents by their debtors was transferred to plaintiff with the consent of the latter and the latter also executed a Hatchita in favour of the plaintiff. The adjudication and vesting order were subsequently discharged and the plaintiff brought a suit on the Hatchita executed by the debtors. Held that the consideration for the execution of the Hatchita by the debtors was that they were relieved from a debt which they believed to be due to the insolvents and the taker put it out of their power to sue on the debt and hence the contract was such that if permitted, it would defeat the provisions of the Insolvency Act and so was void under S. 23 of the Contract Act as the contract was made for an illegal purpose under S. 6 (h) of the Transfer of Property Act and that the defect could not be cured by the setting aside of the insolvency proceedings. The specific law of maintenance and champerty has not been introduced into India and while fair agreements to supply funds to carry on litigation in consideration of having a share of the property if recovered, should not be regarded as per se opposed to public policy yet such agreements should be carefully watched and if, extortionate, and unconscionable or made not with the bona fide object of assisting for a reasonable recompense a claim believed to be just, but for the purpose of gambling in litigation, or of injuring and oppressing others by encouraging unrighteous suits, should be held contrary to public policy and not enforced. The question is one essentially between the vendor and the vendee. Reasonable compensation for the expenses incurred and the services rendered if substantial may, however, be awarded in such cases. An agent can recover from his principal the amounts paid by him for the principal's gambling debt whether the payment was by way of adjustment of accounts or cash and a Hundi executed by the principal in favour of his agent for such payment is for consideraiion, 79 P. R. (1908) Foll. (Robertson and Rattigan, JJ.) GHASI RAM v. JAI LAL. 60 P. W. R. 1912 : 13 I C. 319 : 79 P. L. R. 1912.

——S. 23—Collateral contract—Bond in the name of the mother of creditor's concubine—Enforcement of.

A bond for payment of a loan was taken by the creditor in the name of his concubine's mother. The debtor cannot plead that the consideration for the bond is tainted with immorality and that the bond therefore is unenforceable. The concubine's mother or her assignee can sue as Benamidar and it cannot be treated as involving the enforcement of an immoral contract. (Spencer and Krishnan, JJ.) PONNAMBALA MUDALI v. VASUDEVA PILLAI. 56 I C 616.

——Ss. 23 and 30—Collateral contract Gambling debts—Money lent for gambling—Recovery of.

In a suit upon a pro-note defendant set up that the money was borrowed for gambling purposes. Held, in order to non-suit plaintiff it is not enough for the Court to find generally that the debt was contracted for gambling purposes but it must also find whether it was lent for future play or for past play and what portion of it was used for such a purpose. 7 M 301 F. (Oldfield and Sadasiva Aiyar JJ.) RAMALINGA REDDI v. MUTHU THEVAN. 29 I. C. 573

——Ss. 23 and 65—Collateral contract—Illegal contract—Void contract—Money paid if recoverable.

If an agreement is void but not illegal, plaintiff can recover from a third party money which the latter has received on his behalf under the void agreement. If it is illegal, i.e., probibited by law under a penalty, plaintiff cannot recover as his claim is founded on an illegal act and the receipt of money is itself illegal. (Rigg, J.) HORMASJI v. PO HMYIN. 51 I. C 330: 12 Bur. L. T. 9.

Excise contract.

An agreement to sub-lease salt pan in contravention of terms of license is not specifically enforceable. (Macleod, C. J. and Shah, J.) RABIABIBI v. GANGADHAR. 24 Bom. L. R. 111 : 46 B. 651 : 66 I. C. 393 : 1922 B. 78.

——S. 23—Excise contract—Contract opposed to public policy—Excise Act, S.43—Bombay Abkari Act (V of 1878), S. 43—Condition prohibiting sale or transfer.

The contract of partnership by a licensee of liquor who is prevented only from selling, transferring or sub-letting his right to sell is not for bidden by law or opposed to policy of the Excise Act. (Scott, C. J. and Chandavarkar, J.) KARSAN v. GATLU. 37 Bom. 320 : 19 I. C. 442 : 15 Bom. L. R. 227.

——S. 23—Excise Contracts-Contract for partnership for sale of—Exoiseable articles—Legality.

A partnership in any form for the sale of excisable articles is not necessarily illegal. The Court has to find out with reference to the provisions of the statute whether the terms of the partnership are such as to make it illegal. (Walmsley, J.) JNANENDRA NATH v. CHANDI CHABAN SAHA. 29 I. C. 480.

——S. 23—Excise contracts—Contract to evade excise rules.

Contract to sublet or assign a license is one to evade the excise rules and is void and illegal under S. 23 of Contract Act. (31 C 798 F.) (Coxe and Ryves, JJ.) RAKHALACHANDRA SHAH v. DAMODAR SHAH. 12 Cr. L. J. 11 : 9 I. C. 115 : 15 C. W. N. 169.

——S. 23—Excise contract—Lease to unlicensed person for tapping toddy.

A lease to a person not licensed under the Madras Abkari Act for tapping toddy, is not illegal and can be enforced. (Odgers, J.) SANTHANARAMA MUDALIAR v. SAMI KARUPPUNADAR. 61 I. C. 537 : 14 L. W. 226.

——S. 23—Excise contracts—Abkari license—Taking partner—Contrary to terms of license—Suit by creditor for recovery of moneys advanced to partnership—Knowledge of illegal character.

The taking of a partner by an abkari licensee is in effect a sale to him of a portion of the business and making him an agent for the sale of liquor contrary to the terms of the license and that the partnarship is consequently illegal. 35 M. 582: 26 M. 430: 24 Mad 401 Foll. 27 Bom. 320 and (1910) M.W.N. 549 Dist. Where the carrying on of a business which is prima facie legal becomes malum prohibitum under certain circumstances, the burden of proving that the prohibition was known to a third party lies on the person asserting the existence of such knowledge 20 Q. B. D. 387 and L. R. 8 Q. B. cases 202 referred to. The illegality of the partnership is not an answer to a demand against it arising out of a transaction to which it is a party and which transaction is in itself illegal, unless the person making the demand is himself a particeps criminis and there is something in the transaction touching his conscience he is not affected. 32 Bom. 581, Dist. It is settled that if one of the several distinct promises is illegal it will not prevent the rest from being enforced. (Griffin, J.) BHOLA v. MOHAMMAD HABIBUL RAHMAN KHAN. 10 I. C. 465.

———Ss. 23 and 24—Partial Illegality—Document containing legal and illegal engagements—Enforceability.

CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872), S 23.—Parties to illegal acts.

One cannot ask the court to make a new contract in plea of that which is illegal, but where in the same instrument there are distinct engagements, some of which use legal and some illegal the performance of those which are legal can be enforced. (Miller, C. J. and Adami, J.) GRANT v. EKLAL JHA. 3 Pat. L. T. 386 : 67 I. C. 49 : 1922 P. 171.

———S. 23—Partial illegality—Illegal contract—Part of consideration legal—Legal part not severable from illegal part.

In an illegal contract even though a part of the consideration may be legal yet if the legal part cannot be severed from the illegal, the whole contract is vitiated, by the taint of illegality. (Chapman and Atkinson, JJ.) BINDESHARI PRASAD v. LEKHRAJ SAHU. 20 C. W. N. 760 : 1 Pat. L. J. 48 : 33 I. C. 711 : 3 Pat. L.W. 405.

———Ss. 23, 24 and 65—Partial illegality.

The expression 'discovered to be void' in S. 65 has an application only to cases where the agreement is void for some reasons unknown at the time of making it, but where it is so far an illegality, restitutory suit will not lie, as the party will get no help from a Court on an illegal transaction. A agreed to suffer an award of payment to be proved by B in consideration of the withdrawal of his suit and application for sanction to prosecute B for perjury. A performed his part, but B failed. A then sued on the agreement. Held, (1) that the whole agreement was illegal as A could not ignore its illegal part and (2) A could not get relief on such illegal contract. (*Pratt, J. ———S. 23—Parties to illegal acts—Contract opposed to public policy—Restrictions on dealing in rice—Contract in contravention of—Enforceability.

Where in contravention of the rules framed by the Government and of the terms of a license issued to one of them the parties entered into a contract for whole-sale supply of rice, the contract is illegal as opposed to public policy and where the plaintiff knew of restrictions on the defendants capacity to contract, both are in pari delicto and the plaintiff cannot recover monies advanced to the defendant on the basis of such contract. (Phillips and Devadoss. JJ.) JANU SAIT v. RAMASWAMI NAIDU. (1923) M.W,N. 335 : 32 M.L.T. (H.C.) 330 : 18 L.W. 564 : 72 I. C. 735 : 1923 Mad. 626.

———S. 23—Parties to illegal acts—Plea of illegality—Duty of court to take notice.

CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872), S. 23.—Parties to illegal acts.

If the illegality of a transaction is brought to the notice of the Court and the person invoking the aid of the Court is himself implicated in the illegality, the Court will not assist him.

Contracts which are expressly prohibited by Statute, contracts that are illegal at Common Law as involving the commission of a crime or tort and contracts which are unlawful as being contrary to the public policy are distinguishable from contracts which are not actually unlawful but merely void, either by statute, such as gaming or wagering contracts or on grounds of public policy such as contracts in general restraint of trade. (Ross, J.) JHINGUR OJHA v. MEGHNATH PANDY. 72 I. C. 653 : 1924 P. 321.

——— Ss. 23 and 65—Parties to illegal acts—Contract opposed to public policy—Suit for recovery of money.

A party cannot recover money paid in respect of a contract which is tainted with criminality or immorality, even though the contract has not been performed, 43 C. 115; 1 C. L. J. 261. An agreement by the priest or spiritual adviser of a Hindu lady to use his influence to bring about the adoption by the lady of the particular person is illegal, immoral and opposed to public policy and any money paid under the agreement cannot be recovered though the purpose has not been accomplished. (Miller, C.J. and Roe, J.) RAGHU BER DAS MAHANT v. NATAHAR SINGH.
51 I. C. 280 : 4 Pat. L. J. 542.

——— S. 23—Parties to illegal acts—In pari delicto—Illegality carried out—No relief.

Where an illegal purpose of a void contract has been carried out even in part, a court of equity will not only refuse to enforce the obligations created or to restore property given away, but will also refuse to grant a relief by way of declaration on the principle that no relief could be given to a wrong doer.

Per Chapman, J.—Where the illegal portion of an agreement has been wholly carried into effect, the whole matter is outlawed and the court will not aid either party to retrieve if he is not able to show that he has been less to blame than the other. CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872), S. 23—Slavery bond.

——Ss. 23 and 24—Slavery bond—Unlawful consideration—Indivisible agreement.

A contract under which a labourer engages to work without any payment under conditions which made it practically impossible for him to discharge the debt, is wholly void. Such a contract is indistinguishable from slavery. A contract in which it is impossible to separate the unlawful part of the consideration from the lawful part is wholly void under S. 24 of the Act. Stifling Prosecution.

——S. 23—Stifling prosecution—Consideration—Abandonment of prosecution in non-compoundable case—Document void.

Where the consideration for a bond is found to be an agreement to abandon the prosecution in a matter, and if the court comes to the conclusion that the parties were acting together with a view to perpetrate a fraud, and did in fact perpetrate that fraud and that there is no difference in the degree of guilt of the plaintiff (who is asking the court to give him some help) and that of the defendant, the duty of the Court is not to assist either party ; in other words, the duty of the court is to dismiss the claim, because the Court having then in its knowledge that it has before it, two persons equally guilty of fraud, will not assist either of them. Once it is established that the parties are pari delicto, the Courts will not assist an illegal transaction in any respect, that is to say, the person who asks the Court to do something will fail. ——— S. 23—Stifling prosecution — Unlawful consideration.

An agreement to prevent the due progress of prosecution of an offence, which cannot be lawfully compounded is unlawful and hence void. Private adjustment of damages caused by such offence is not unlawful if the public right to prosecute is left intact. A threat to prosecute or expectation not to be prosecuted by a compromise of the civil wrong is not an agreement not to prosecute. There must be collusion between the offender and the injured person, to affect the course of Criminal Law. It is immaterial whether or not the offence compounded could have been proved by the prosecution had it not been obstructed by the compromise if there was reasonable ground to prosecute. CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872), S. 24.

The provisions of S. 24, Contract Act do not render wholly invalid a mortgage in one deed of the mortgagor's occupancy holding which he has no right to mortgage and his fixed rate tenancy which he can validly mortgage. Per Walsh, J.C,—S. 24 does not apply to a case where the plaintiff is seeking to enforce an equity in respect of a perfectly valid security. ———S. 24—Promissory note—Part of consideration illegal—Suit—Dismissal of.

Where a part of consideration of a pro-note was loss at gambling and hence illegal, and where this could not be separated from the legal part of the consideration, the whole suit on the pro-note ought to be dismissed. (Richards, C. J. and Piggott, J.) BALGOBIND v. BHAGGU MALL.

———S 24—Void contract—'Forbidden by law'—Occupancy holding—Transfer of.

A transfer of an occupancy holding is forbidden by law, and a contract, a part of the consideration for which is such a transfer, is void under S. 24. (Piggott, J.) RAM PARTAP RAI v. RAM PHAL TELI. 18 I. C. 9.

———S. 24—One of several considerations unlawful—Validity of contract.

In a contract where one of several considerations is unlawful, e. g., a transfer of property which cannot be transferred under S. 6 (a), T. P. Act, the whole agreement is void. (Lindsay, J.) (C) SHIAM SUNDAR v. DILGANJAN SINGH.

———S. 24—Champertous agreement not void.

Plaintiff who married her mother's servant made an agreement with a certain person that if she succeeded in her suit for her mother's property he would get half the property and if she failed he was to bear the costs. Held the suit was not a speculative one at all. The plaintiff respondent had a natural right to succeed to her mother's estate and the burden of proving that she had lost the right by her marriage with the servant was on the defendants appellants. ———S. 25—Consideration — Compromise—Partnership—Mortgage of partnership property by one partner—Binding character of mortgage disputed by the other partner—Compromise—Subsequent declaration of invalidity of mortgage as regards the disputing mortgagor's share—Effect of.

Under the terms of a compromise arrived at between two partners, in a suit for dissolution of partnership, one of the partners agreed to accept as binding upon him a mortgage of partnership property executed by the other partner and originally disputed by him, and to pay a sum of money in consideration of his share in the mortgaged property being released, a major portion of which amount, however, he failed to pay. The Privy Council subsequently held in a suit brought by the mortgagee on the foot of the said mortgage, that it was not binding on the partner who originally disputed the same but subsequently accepted it and the whole of the mortgage money was realized by the mortgagee from the executant of the mortgage alone. Held, that the other partner was liable to contribute to the said debt by paying the amount originally agreed to be paid by him under the terms of the compromise notwithstanding the fact that the mortgage in dispute was subsequently pronounced by the Privy Council not to be binding on him. ———S. 25—Valid contract—Writing Signed by agent—Pleader if authorised to admit liability.

In order that a valid contract may be constituted under S. 25 (3) of the Contract Act it is necessary that the statement should be in writing and should be signed by the person charged therewith or by the agent generally or specially authorized. Where there was no proof at all that a pleader who made the statement relied upon as a contract had any general or special authority from the defendant which would entitle him to enter into a contract on their behalf to pay a time barred debt, and the pleader's authority was confined to conduct of the case his statement that if during the pendency of the suit the plaintiff obtained a succession certificate, the defendants were ready to submit to a decree for the amount claimed together with interest for six months did not constitute unqualified admission of liablity within the meaning of S. 25 of the Contract Act. Nor could the court treat the statement as showing in any way that the pleader who made it had authority to bind the defendant by a fresh contract under section 25 of the Contract Act. ——S. 25—Consideration—Promise to defend a suit—Contract of sale.

The promise of the vendee to defend a suit to be brought by a collateral of the vendors constituted a legal consideration for the contract of sale. As regards the validity of the contract, it matters little if collateral did not bring any suit and the vendee was consequently not called upon to expend any money on behalf of the vendors does not make any difference so far as the validity of the contract is concerned. ——S. 25—Abstention from suit—Validity.

Bonds executed in return for plaintiff's abstaining to sue for the interest and which were executed before the decision declaring such bonds invalid are not bad. If an intending litigant bona fide forbears a right to litigate which is not vexatious or frivolous, he does give up something of value, even if the suit may turn out to be wrong. ——S. 25—Debt, meaning of.

The word 'debt' in S. 25 is held in its ordinary meaning of a sum payable in respect of a loan recoverable by action. A promise to pay the amount which might be found due by the arbitrator on taking the accounts is not a promise to pay a 'debt' within S. 25 of the Act. (*Wallis, C. ——S. 25—Disputed claim—Valid and bona fide compromise.

The abandonment of a bonafide claim is a good consideration for a compromise though the claim may be based on a void agreement, and the onus will be on the defendant to show that the claim was not bona fide (Wallis, J.) THANGAVELU CHETTY v. MUKUNDU NAIDU. 14 M. An intending litigant who bona fide forbears to litigate a question of law or fact which it is not vexatious or frivolous to litigate does give up something of value, but there must be in fact a serious claim honestly made. The forbearance of a claim which was not maintainable cannot be treated as

In order to create a new contract as required by the latter, the promise to pay must be expressed. A debt due by a joint Hindu family was divided into three equal parts and each of three branches acknowledged severally to pay each portion. Held, a new contract might be implied from the terms of the acknowledgment, apart from the terms of S. 25. ——S. 25 (3)—Barred debt—Conditional promise to pay.

Where the debtor promised to pay by a share of the profits of a business, Held, that the plaintiff could not recover in any other way. An acknowledgment of barred debt does not give a fresh period of limitation in favour of creditors. Under S. 25, Cl. (3), a barred debt is considered a good consideration for a promise to pay and the new promise is the measure of the creditor's right. The promise may be absolute or conditional. The whole of the promise whether free or clogged with a condition, gives the cause of action. (*D. Chatterjee and N. R. A wife took steps to divorce her husband and the latter agreed to live in her house to work and support her, and not to take another wife, but did not carry out the agreement. Held, that a suit for damages for breach was maintainable despite the subsistence of defendant's marriage with plaintiff. A stipulation not to take another wife was not contrary to the Buddhist Law, and therefore did not contravene S. 26 of the Contract Act. Though the stipulation not to take another wife may have been illegal as being in contravention of S. 26 of the Contract Act, yet the promises to live in plaintiff's house and to work and support her, were good and lawful, and, therefore, enforceable under S. 57 of the Contract Act. a river, in favour of another person having a ferry boat on the same river, the former purported to buy from the latter the good will of his trade in plying the ferryboats and every description of interest and ownership which the latter had acquired in several river landing places for plying the boats as well as the settlement obtained for the collection of tolls. The price was to be paid by instalment and if default was made in payment of any instalment the entirety was to become due at once. No question of title was to be raised by the buyer of the good will. In addition to the transfer of good will, there was an agreement or kobala executed about the same debt by the person selling the good will in favour of the buyer purporting to transfer the rights of the former, in the landing places and settlements and in the good wills of the business and plying the ferryboats, in consideration of the price promised to be paid under the first document. The transferee was to be able to enjoy and possess these rights by exercising whatever rights the transferor had in them and the latter undertook to close the business of plying further ferryboats and promised to return the whole amount, if he ever carried on the business again. The buyer made a default in paying instalment and a suit was brought by the seller. The other side contended that the agreement was in restraint of trade and therefore was void. Held that as the documents showed it amounted to a sale of good will and therefore was valid. Speculation does not necessarily involve a contract by way of wager to constitute such a contract. A common intention to wager is essential. The mere fact that one party to a contract for sale of goods did not intend to deliver even if known to the other party does not vitiate the contract, unless there is a bargain or understanding between the parties that delivery, is not to be called for. Nor does the mere fact, that, as to the greater part of the goods there was no delivery but an adjustment of claims, vitiate the transaction. ———S. 30—Wagering contract—Intention.

To determine whether a contract is one of wager it must be seen whether the parties intend to take delivery and whether the parties are dealing with actual commodities that they are handling or expecting to handle or agreeing to settle an account according to fluctuation in prices of commodities in which they do not have and cannot expect to have any real title. When persons, in a position to carry out a contract and expected to be in that position at the time of performance, contract to recieve or deliver goods at a future date such contracts are not necessarily wegering contracts because there is an element of speculation in them, even if the contracts provide for the alternative of receiving or paying on differences instead of for actual delivery. The question whether the contracts between the parties are of a wagering nature is really a question of fact, that is to say, the party disputing that he was liable under the contracts would have to show that at the time the contracts were entered into the parties did not intend to carry on the contracts but agreed to abide by the prices at the due dates, when differences would be received. The mere fact that a contract is a teji contract or a mundi contract or a teji mundi contract with double option does not give rise to an inference that it is a wagering contract and therefore void. The question depends on the common intention of the parties and is one of fact. It may be that if a party desires to prove that a particular contract of theabove description was a wagering contract, he may be able to do so with slight proof. The mere fact of a contract being a tejimundi contract is not by itself sufficient to take it out of the ordinary rule that the party who pleads that the contract is void as being in the nature of a wager as to prove that fact. 37 B. 264; 12 Bom L. ——S. 30—Wagering contract—Burden of proof—Onus on defendant.

The plaintiff sold two bales of yarn to the defendant, who at a later date re-sold them to the plff. at lower rates. The plaintiff sued to recover the difference between the two bales as damages. The defendant contended that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover, the contracts being a wagering one. At the hearing the Court examined both the plaintiff and the defendant, neither of them was cross-examined by the other side. As neither party produced any evidence, the Court decided the suit on the pleadings and statements of parties and dismissed the suit. Held, that the suit should be decreed inasmuch as the defendant has absolutely failed to prove, what he was bound to prove in order to succeed, in his defence, that the suit transactions were of the nature of wagering contracts. If the defendant does not choose to go into the witness box on his own behalf that is a matter for himself to decide. In any ordinary case however, the Court is entitled to consider that as a point against the defendant. The plaintiff is not bound to issue a summons to the defendant and unless the defendant gives evidence on his own behalf so as to give the plaintiff an opportunity of cross-examining him, then the Court is entitled to infer everything against the defendant. ——S. 30—Wagering contract—Defence of wager—Onus on defendant to prove that both parties agreed neither to ask for nor to give delivery—Tejimandi transactions.

In the transaction known as teji the buyer of the teji pays the seller a premium or teji over and above the contract price of the commodity or goods. If the market raises the buyer of the teji who is also a buyer of the commodity or goods can ask the seller of the teji to give him the commodity or goods or the value of such commodity or goods at the market rate on the settling day. If the market falls the buyer of the teji merely loses his premium. Teji and vaida transactions are on exactly the same footing and unless it can be positively proved that the parties agreed neither to ask for nor to give delivery the transactions are not wagering contracts. On 6th January 1919, the plaintiff bought from the defendant twenty-five cases of Japanese camphor at the rate of Rs. 2-12-0 a tin for delivery on the 15th April 1919. He paid the defendant Rs. 125 as teji at the rate of one anna on every Rs. 2-12-0. On 7th February 1919, he further bought for the same delivery one hunderd cases of camphor at Rs. 2-13-0 a tin and paid the defendant Rs. 500 as teji at the rate of one anna on every Rs. 2-13-0. On 15th February, he again bought one hundred and fifty cases of camphor for the same delivery at Rs. 2-15-0 a tin and paid the defendant Rs. 750 as teji at the rate of one anna on every Rs. 2-15-0. The price of the camphor rose to Rs. 5-2-0 pert in and the plaintiff wrote to the defendant, on the 14th April 1919, that he would take delivery on the next day. On the 15th of April 1919 he went to the defendant and tendered the contract price and asked for delivery of the camphor. The defendant had no camphor to deliver and he replied to the plaintiff's letter that the plaintiff was not entitled to any delivery as the transactions were wagering and therefore invalid. The plaintiff sued the defendant claiming the difference between the rate at which he bought the camphor and its price on the settling day.

Held, that, as the defendant had failed to prove that there was an agreement or understanding between him and the plaintiff that in case the market rose the plaintiff should not require the defendant to deliver to him any camphor the transactions were not wagering contracts.

The transactions known as teji mandi, teji and mandi explained and discussed. (Kincaid, J.) MANUBHAI PREMANAND v. KESHAVJI RAMDAS. 65 I. C. 682 : 24 Bom. L. R. 60 : 1922 Bom. 66.

An agreement entered into by the plaintiff with a club by way of wager which had organized a lottery though sanctioned by Government is void under the first part of S. 30 of the Contract Act and of the first part of S. 1 of Bombay Act III of 1865. The effect of the sanction of the Government of the lottery is that no prosecution would lie in respect thereof but that sanction did not affect the Civil Law on the subject of lotteries, as the Government had no power to overrule an Act of the legislature by correspondence. defendant with the plaintiff, and they were entered in the books at Cawnpore but no goods were ever actually delivered. An adjustment of accounts was made in 1908 and a balance was found due to the defendant. After 1908 no forward contracts were entered in the accounts though the munim carried on the transactions with the plaintiff who did not know that the munim was acting in his own behalf. The defendant asked the plaintiff for information about goods bought and sold through them. They supplied the same some days after demand and brought the suit for the balance due on the contracts. Held, that the defendant was bound by the transaction entered into by the munim both before and after 1908 up to 1911. But the transactions being only for differences was a wagering one and hence could not be enforced. (Scott, C. J. and Batchelor, J.) CHHOGMAL BALKISONDAS v. JAINARAYAN KANAIYALAL.

A seller may, technically speaking, be said to deliver goods to his buyer by giving him a delivery order on a certain person but just as mercantile contracts may be used for the purpose of transactions for payment of differences so also delivery orders may be used and passed from hand to hand amongst persons who have no other intention than that of adjusting differences amongst themselves. ——S. 30—Teji Mandi contracts—Burden of proof.

Teji Mandi contracts are wagering contracts and a person alleging to the contrary must prove it. Big firms may, in the course of extensive buying and selling business, carry on transactions similar to Teji Mandi of Bombay Bazaar, by way of providing a certain amount of cover. But parties who carry on a small business and indulge in Teji Mandi contracts by way of pledging ought not to be allowed to enforce their wager. Ability of the party to pay full price, is not a sure guide to decide that the party really intended to enter into the contract. Strict proof of the genuineness of the contract, must be insisted upon. (Beaman, J.) JESSIRAM JAGANNATH v. TULSIDAS.

A common intention to wager is essential in a contract by way of wager within the meaning of S. 30 of the Act. Speculation does not necessarily involve a contract by way of wager whether a contract is speculation or wager is to be determined by the Court. It must look behind the form of the contract to the real intention of the parties gathered from the oral evidence and the transactions between the parties. A Court should scrutinize the evidence of the defendant when he accepts payments when the dealings are successful but pleads wagering contract when the transaction ends in loss. CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872), S. 30.

——S. 30—Lottery—Kuri in Malabar.

Kuri as such in Malabar is not wagering contract. But a suit to recover money in excess of the amount subscribed towards 'Kuri' is not enforceable. (Phillips, J.) SANKUNNI v. IKKORAKUTTI. 10 L. W 155 : 37 M. L. J. 209 : 52 I. C. 989 : (1919) M. W. N. 570.

——Ss. 30 and 65—Wagering contract—Money paid as security for performance of—Suit for recovery, if maintainable.

Money deposited by the plaintiff with the defendant as security for the performance of his part of wagering a contract is recoverable, provided there is no fraud or moral delinquency on the part of the plaintiff. 33 Bom. 411 and 38 Bom. 249 Foll. But S. 65 of the Contract Act has no application to such a case. 43 Cal, 115 and 41 Bom. 546 Foll. (Seshagiri Aiyar and Napier, JJ.) VENKATARAJU v. RAMANUJAM. 34 M. L. J. 561: 23 M. L. ——S. 30—Contract to pay differences is wagering contract.

Where the parties never intended to deliver the goods but only meant to pay differences and that was the understanding between the parties. Held, that the contracts between the parties were wagering. (Kotval, A. J. C.) HARNARAYAN JODH RAJ v. RADHAKISAN CHANDRABHAN. 75 I. C. 906 : 1923 Nag. 324.

——S. 30—Wagering contract—Essentials of—Sale of a crop.

The essence of gaming and wagering is that one party to win and the other to lose on a future event, which at the time of the contract, is of an uncertain nature, that is to say, if the events turns but one way he will lose, but if it turns the other way he will win. Richards v. Storck (1911) 1 K. B. 296 foll. The sale of a growing crop for cash is not gaming or wagering though the consideration is to be paid in kind out of the proceeds of the harvest. (Macnair, A. J. C.) VITHOBA v. SITARAM. 19 N. L. R. 21 : 65 I C 324 : 1923 Nag. 291.

——S. 30—Scope of—Collateral transaction—Co-partner—Right of re-imbursement.

S. 30 of the Contract Act does not affect agreements or transactions collateral to wagers. Where two partners enter into a contract, even assuming it to be one of a wagering nature, and one of them satisfies the whole liability under the contract, he has a right of reimbursement against the other. (Prideaux, A. J. C.) MOHAMMAD GULAM MUSTAFFA v. PADAMSI. 69 I. C. 186 : 1923 Nag. 48.

——S. 30—Wagering contract—Speculative contract—Distinction between.

A contract may be unenforceable, if it only amounts to a wager on the rise or fall of the market, and it is not accompanied by an intention to sell or to purchase goods, at a given time and place at a certain rate. To some extent, speculation forms an element in many transactions relating to the sale and delivery of goods at a certain rate, and because the market-rate for those goods may be liable to fluctuation ; but the existence of such an element does not make the contract void, because it may yet be accompanied by a real desire on the part of the vendor to sell and the buyer to purchase the goods agreed to be sold, at the contracted rate. Where such an intention exists, the contract is not a wagering contract and can be enforced. (Kanhaiya Lal, J. C.) NARAYAN DAS v. MAHESHI LAL. 9 O. & A. L. R. 538: 9 & O. A. L. R. 567 : 73 I. C. 309 : 1924 Oudh 186.

——S. 30—Wagering contract—What amounts to.

Where the plaintiff expects that the goods would be delivered to him and he enters into the contract with that expectation, and also in the hope of making some profit upon the difference in price. Held : the defendants might or might not have intended to deliver the goods, but that would not make the contract as a contract of wager. In order to bring a contract under S. 30 of the Contract Act it is necessary to show that both parties intended that no delivery or acceptance shall take place and agreed that the mere difference between the price at the time of the bargain and the price at some later time shall be paid ; but if only one of the parties intends that no delivery shall take place the contract is not vitiated. Speculation does not necessarily involve a contract by way of wager and to constitute such a contract a common intention to wager is essential. 44 Bom. 373 followed referred to. ——S. 30—Lottery—Suit to recover money received in a lottery.

A suit to recover money by the defendant as agent for plaintiff on account of plaintiff's winnings in a lottery is not prohibited by S. 30. (Rig, J.) HORMASJI v. PO HMYIN. 51 I. C 530 : 12 Bur. L. T. 9.

——Ss. 30 and 65—Wagering contract—Money paid to shareholder—If can be recovered.

Money paid under an illegal contract may be recovered before the contract is carried out but not afterwards. (Young, J.) AH FOKE v. M. A. NAGAPPA CHETTY. 46 I. C. 755.

——S. 30—Teji and mundi contracts—Whether wagering contracts.

The purchase of an option or right to call for shares is not necessarily a wagering contract; the test is whether in such a contract, differences only are intended to be paid ; so also a double option is no more necessarily a gamble than a single option. A contrat is not a wagering contract unless neither of the parties intend to give or take delivery. (Young, J.) DHUNJI DEOSI v. POKERMALL ANANDROY. 24 I. C. 441 : 7 Bur. L. T. 54 :

——S. 30—Common intention—Onus of proof

Where a plea of wager is set up, in defence the onus of proof is on defendant ; and he has to prove that the common intention of the parties was to pay by way of difference and not by way of delivery. The question of common intention is one of fact in every case. (Kennedy, J. C. and Madgaonkar, A. J. C.) RADHOMAL KESHOWDAS v. HOLOMAL KESUMAL.

——S. 30—Wegering contract—Intention of parties.

To constitute wagering contracts, the intention of both contracting parties at the time of entering into the contracts must be not to call for or give delivery from and to each other under any circumstances. (Raymond, A. J. C.) FIRM OF KIRPALDAS v. FIRM OF GAJANMAL.
70 I. C. 864: 15 S. L. R. 5.

——S. 30—Wagering contract—Broker incurring losses—Presumption—Burden of proof.

In a wagering contract, a common intention between the principal and the broker to wager is essential and the burden of proving it is on the principal. Where the broker is entitled to commission and any losses incurred, which he has paid, the transaction is not a wager. (Fawcett, J C. and Kennedy, A.J.C.) DWARKOMAL v. HARCHUMAL. 60 I. C. 944 : 14 S. L. R. 227.

——S. 32—Conditional contract.

A contingent contract is dependent for its performance on a future event and falls through if the future event on which it was dependent becomes impossible. Where the possibility of completing a contract is dependent on the will of a third person, a defendant who has entered into the contract to the performance of which such consent is necessary, will not, if such consent cannot be procured, be directed to obtain it and thus perform an impossibility. (Batten, A. J. C.) SHARDA PERSHAD v. SIKANDAR
34 I. C. 461 : 12 N. L. R. 69.

——S. 32— Wager — Meaning — Collateral contracts—Lottery.

A suit will lie for recovery of money, won in a lottery and paid to a third person as agent of winner, the former being liable to account. The taint is purged by its passing into the third person's hands. The words 'by way of wager' in the section are not different from 'gaming' and 'wagering' as used in the English Gaming Act and the Indian Act XXI of 1848. ——S. 37—Stranger.

If person reaps the benefit of a contract without being party to it he must pay the money due under it. The doctrine that no stranger can enforce a contract though made for his benefit does not universally apply in India. Parties to a contract can only sue on it, except where the contract

A tender of performance must satisfy all the requirements of the contract as to delivery. (Young, J.) JANOO & CO. v. JOSEPH HEAP & SONS, LTD. 46 I. C. 497 : 11 Bur. L. T. 9.

——Ss. 37 and 38—Vendor's duty.

Vendor is not bound to see that purchaser takes delivery within time. Where it is necessary for vendee to take samples before delivery, the vendor is bound to deliver goods some time before the specified date so as to give him time to satisfy himself. ——S. 38—Tender—Rent—Reduced amount tendered—Claim for abatement unsustainable—Tender bad.

Where the tenant tendered a reduced amount of rent and interest on arrears, on the plea that not having been possession of the entire area he was entitled to an abatement of rent, but no ground was made out for such abatement by the tenant, the tender is not a good tender. A debtor when tendering to a creditor really part of his debt, not the entire debt, and asking him to take that in full satisfaction of the debt. it is clear law that the creditor is entitled to refuse to accept the tender, because otherwise he would virtually preclude himself from saying that he had not been paid the full amount due. If you go and attach your offer to pay a debt the condition that the creditor must accept it as full satisfaction although really it is not the whole amount due, you attach a condition to your offer and the creditor is entitled to reject it. A conditional tender of rent demanding a receipt that the tenant paying the rent was a kaimi raiyat is not a good tender. (Fletcher, J.) AMAR KRISHNA SEN v. CHANDRA KUMAR SEN. 51 I. C. 793.

——— S. 38—Mortgagee—Payment to one co-mortgagee—Discharge.

A payment of the mortgage money to one of several co-mortgagees, without the consent of the other mortgagees is not a discharge that will bind all the mortgagees. The section does not deal with the case of an offer accepted by one of several joint promisees but refers only to the case of an offer which has been rejected. 36 M. 461, 20 M. L. ———S. 38—Tender--Without interest expressly stipulated—Not a valid tender.

Where a bond recited that if three instalments fall in arrears the whole principal becomes payable, a tender by the debtor of principal only without interest on overdue instalments when the latter is stipulated expressly in the bond, is not a proper tender and interest on overdue instalments is recoverable. (Srinivasa Aiyangar, J.) THIRUVANNAMALAI SERVAI v. VARADARAJULU NAIDU. 31 I. C. 304.

———Ss. 38, 52, 54, and 83—Failure to take delivery after notice of arrival—Damages.

If a condition in a contract that notice should be given of the arrival of goods is not an essential part of it, failure to give such notice or a mistake in the notice given is not a breach of contract and a party to it, cannot avoid it. That notice by itself cannot be deemed to be an offer of performance within S. 38. Where on the receipt of notice of arrival of goods, one party has to apply for delivery of goods but fails to do so, he is liable in damages for breach of contract. ———S. 38—Mortgage—Tender—Conditional tender.

A tender is not valid pro tanto if a larger sum is in fact due and if the tender is accompanied by a demand for cancellation and delivery of the mortgage deed. (Bakewell, J.) VARADARAJULU CHETTY v. DHANALAKSHMI AMMAL. 26 I. C. 184: 16 M. L. T. 365.

CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872), S. 38.

———S. 38—Tender—What is not.

A mere offer by postal letter to tender the expenses of sale and registration by the vendee is not a legal tender. (Sadasiva Aiyar and Napier, JJ.) MULPURI VEEPAYYA v. SANAGAVARAPU SIVAYYA. 26 I. C. 121: 27 M. L. J. 482.

———S. 38—Offer—By letter—Readiness to deliver.

The mere expression by a registered posted letter of a willingness or readiness to deliver is not a proper offer nor of a willingness to execute a release deed without having a document ready to be delivered. Tender of money locked up in a box or of goods enclosed in a case, which the other party is not allowed to open is not sufficient tender and the tender as a plea in an action is incomplete unless accompanied by a tender in Court. ———S. 38--Payment to one promisee--Effect of.

The section seems to treat each joint promisee as a partner or agent of the other joint promisee to accept tender and payment. So payment to one has the legal effect of payment to all. Per White, C. J. The section does not deal with the legal consequences of an accepted tender. (White, C. J. Sankaran Nair and Sadasiva Aiyar, JJ.) MANNAVA ANNAPURNAMMA v. UPPALA AKKAYYA. 36 Mad. 544: 18 M. L. ———S. 38—Tender—Stopping of interest.

A valid tender must be an unconditional offer to pay a specific and ascertained sum. An offer to pay the amount found due on a settlement of accounts if the payee undertook to execute an indemnity bond, is not a valid tender. A valid tender improperly refused stops further interest. There cannot be a tender or an agreement to waive a tender of an unascertained sum. (White, C. J. and Ayling, J.) LAL BATCHA SAHIB v. ARCOTT NARAYANASWAMY MUDALIAR. 12 I. C. 502: 34 Mad. 320.

———S. 38—Applicability—Joint principals—Liability of agent to amount.

CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872), S. 38.

The liability of an agent to account to two principals who jointly appointed him is not a liability that arises by virtue of a contract between the parties but is a liability that is annexed by law to the office of the agent. S. 38 of the Contract Act does not apply to such a case. (Das and Kulwant Sahay, JJ.) JAGDIP PRASAD SAHI v. MT. RAJU KUER. 2 P. 585: 4 Pat. L. T. 531 : 75 I. ——— S. 38—Payment to one mortgagee—Operates as discharge.

S. 38 of the Contract Act applies to an offer which has been accepted as well as to an offer which has been refused, whether S. 38 applies to payment to one of several joint mortgagees or not, the rule of equity applicable in India is that in the absence of fraud or an intention to defeat the rights of other mortgagees, payment to a single mortgagee discharges the mortgagor. (Pipon, J. C.) GULMIRAN v. ABDUL RAHIM KHAN. 73 I. C. 682.

——— S. 38— Co-mortgagees—Joint promisees—Payment to one whether discharges the mortgage.

Payment of the mortgage debt to one of several mortgagees operates so as to discharge the liability of the mortgagor to other co-mortgagees.

In view of the difference in the conditions of social life in India as in England it appears to be doubtful, whether and to what extent the presumption prevalent in England, that when a claim is on a money bond to two or more obligees, they are to be presumed to be tenants in common and not joint tenants and discharge by one obligee does not operate as discharge by the others, should have effect given to it in this country, in cases in which equitable relief is claimed. S. 38 only requires a reasonable opportunity to be given to the buyer to examine the goods sold. (Ormond, Offg, C. J.) OOMERSEE RAISEC & Co. v. HARDIMAN. 42 I. C. 382.

——— Ss. 39, 55—Performance accepted after time fixed—No right to compensation.

The acceptance by the buyer of a waggon of coal at a time other than that agreed upon prevents him from claiming compensation for any loss occasioned by such failure unless he shows that at the time of such contract he gave notice of his intention to claim compensation. ——— S. 39—Contract — Conveyance —Distinction—Mortgage, it can be cancelled under.

Per Karamat Hussain, J.—A mortgage is different from a contract and the mere registration of a mortgage deed vests an interest in the mortgagee which cannot be defeated and so a mortgage cannot be cancelled under S. 39 of the Contract Act. CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872), S. 39.

——— S. 39—Refusal to perform—Right to cancel.

To enable a party to a contract to be relieved from its future performance by the conduct of the other, the conduct must amount to a renunciation or absolute refusal to perform the contract, such as would amount to a revision if be had the power to rescind. Where a party to a contract complains about the delay in carrying out the contract and protests against the other party's right to put an end to it, refusal to perform is not effected, (*Sanderson, C. ——— S. 39—Default in performance—Damages.

Where there is a contract of which specific performance would not be decreed by a Court of equity, the plaintiff is entitled owing to the wrongful repudiation of that contract by the defendants, to treat the contract itself as at an end and to recover damages for the loss of it in addition to damages in respect of those breaches of it which may have been committed before repudiation. ——S. 41—Scope of—Mortgage—New invalid mortgage—Prior mortgage kept alive.

S. 41 of the Contract Act which provides for the discharge of a contract by the acceptance of performance by a third party, applies only when the contract has in fact been performed. A Hindu mortgaged his five-sixths share of a village and died leaving a widow and a divided nephew as his reversioner, The nephew who owned the remaining one sixth of the village mortgaged it to the same mortgagee. Subsequently the widow and nephew jointly executed two mortgages of the whole village for the amounts due under their old mortgages. The mortgagee sued on the later mortgages bu the mortgage was held to be unenforceble so far as the widow was concerned. Thereupon he sued on the original mortgage. Held, that though the mortgagee's intention at the time of the later mortgages was to accept a new security in lieu of the old, yet as this was frustrated by the later mortgage being held invalid against the widow, it was inequitable for the nephew's sons who had succeeded as reversioners of the original mortgagor, to set up that the later deeds operated as a release of the mortgage effected by him. The mortgagee could therefore enforce the original mortgage against five-sixths share of the village. (Lord Parker,) HAR CHANDI LAL v. SHEORAJ SINGH. 39 All 178: 32 M. L. J. 241: 15 A. L. auction or private sale and the defendants were bound to make good to the plaintiffs any loss that they might suffer by the re-sale. No delivery was asked for by the defendants during October-November 1913 and the goods were manufactured by the plaintiffs against this contract. Up to July 1914 the defendants took delivery in small quantities of sixty-six bales of 20s and forty-two bales of 20½s. On 9th July 1914, the plaintiffs wrote to the defendants to arrange to take immediate delivery of the remaining ninety-two bales. On 13th January 1915, the plaintiffs gave notice to the defendants that if they did not take delivery within twelve days they would resell the bales by public auction. On 10th of February 1915, the bales were sold by auction and they realised Rs. 9,951—1—6 against the contract price of Rs. 14,946-1-6 leaving a difference of Rs. 4.995. The plaintiffs claimed from the defendants this amount together with interest and godown rent and fire insurance as per terms of the contract, in all Rs. 5,858-6-3. The defendants replied that under the contract, the delivery was to be in October-November 1913 that the defendants were ready and willing to take delivery of the bales but as the bales were not ready the plaintiffs were not in a position to give delivery and the defendants therefore repudiated their liability in the matter. The plaintiffs having sued the defendants to recover the amount: Held, (1) that, as there was no evidence to show that the terms of the contract were altered by mutual consent and therefore the contract remained in existence after the end of November as altered by the parties, the Court could not say what was the altered contract: (2) that, whenever after the end of November 1913 the defendants asked for delivery it was optional to the plaintiffs to give them delivery and if the plaintiffs chose to give them delivery at the rates mentioned in the previous contract, that was a separate transaction, and the Court could not imply from the plaintiffs having given delivery of some bales in December 1913 to the defendants, that the parties had entered into a new contract whereby the plaintiffs agreed to give delivery to the defendants of the remaining bales according as the defendants should choose to ask for them. (3) that the Court could only read the contract according to the plain intention of the words in the written contract, and that as the parties did nothing under the contract within the contract period, the written contract thereby came to an end. ——S. 55—Effect of failure—Contract—Time when essence of the contract—Date fixed for performance and penalty for breach—Laches—Party—Guilty of—Rights and liabilities of.

If a party to a contract promises to do a certain thing at or before specified time, it must be ascertained whether, in fact, performance of the contract by one party was meant to depend on the other party's promise being fulfilled by day named or whether a day was named merely to secure a performance within a reasonable time. The mere fact that a date has been mentioned does not conclusively prove that the time was the essence of the contract. Although in contracts for a sale of land the time fixed for completion is not initially of the essence of the contract, either party may be guilty of unnecessary delay and may entitle the other party to serve upon him a notice limiting the time at the expiration of which, he will treat the contract as at an end. The reasonableness of the time so limited, is determined by the Court with reference not merely to what remains to be done at the date of the notice, but all the circumstances of the case including the previous day of the party in default and the attitude of the other side in relation to it. ———S 55—Sale of land—Time not essence of the contract—Suit for specific performance—Relief when refused.

S. 55 of the Contract Act does not lay down any principle which differs from the law of England as to contracts for sale of land. In such cases, equity, looks at the substance and not at the letter of the agreement in order to ascertain whether the properties notwithstanding that they named a specific time within which the sale was to be completed, really and in substance intended more than that it should take place within a reasonable time. Prima facie equity treats the importance of such time limits as being subordinate to the main purpose of the parties. Specific performance of a contract to sell land, will be granted, although there has been a failure to keep the dates assigned to it, if justice can be done between the parties and if nothing in the express stipulations of the parties the nature of the property or the surrounding circumstances, make it inequitable to grant relief. An intention to make time of the essence of the contract must be expressed in unmistakable language; it may be inferred from what passed between the parties before but not after the contract is made. CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872), S. 55—Sale of land.

——— S. 55—Sale of land—Contract for sale of immoveable property—Time made essence of the contract by notice—Breach—Notice unreasonable—Specific performance.

By an agreement, dated 27th February, 1919 the defendant agreed to sell to the plaintiff certain immoveable property and the plaintiff paid to the defendant Rs. 500 as earnest money. Clause (3) of the agreement provided that the sale should be completed within three months from the date thereof and time was made of the essence of the contract. Subsequently both the parties agreed that the time for completion of the contract should be extended beyond the three months mentioned in the clause. There was considerable delay on both sides in preparing requisition for title, in answering requisitions, and in the preparation and approval of the draft conveyance. After some correspondence as to the engrossment of the conveyance, the defendant wrote to the plaintiff on 27th August 1919, that unless the sale was completed before 1st September 1919, time being of the essence of the contract, the contract would be treated as broken by the plaintiff and the earnest money would be forfeited. The plaintiff did nothing further until the 2nd September 1919 on which date he sent the engrossment of the conveyance to the defendant who in reply wrote on the same day that he had forfeited the earnest money. The plaintiff, thereafter, tendered the purchase money but it was refused. The plaintiff, thereupon, filed a suit for specific performance of the agreement of 27th February 1919. Held, (1) that as there were no special circumstances which would demand that the contract should be completed on the 1st September 1919, the notice given on 27th August 1919 to complete the contract in four days was not a reasonable notice: (2) that considering the extremely leisurely way in which both the parties had proceeded from the date of contract, there was no reason why the defendant should be entitled to demand of the plaintiff that the matter should be completed within four days and that in default the contract should be considered as broken; (3) that there was nothing in the surrounding circumstances to indicate that the defendant would be so prejudiced by further delay in the completion of the contract that equity would not assist the plff. in getting it performed; and (4) that the plff. was, therefore, entitled to the assistance of the Court in obtaining specific performance. 40 Bom. 289 followed. A, the occupant of certain survey numbers in a Taluka agreed to sell to B, stumps of teak and blackwood trees in those survey numbers. By Government Resolution No. 7114, dated 27th October 1897 in force at the time of this contract, A had a privilege of pre-emption in respect of such stumps. Subsequently on 11th May, 1905, the Government abolished the right of pre-emption and instead directed that the forest department should sell the trees and 20 per cent of the net proceeds should be paid to the occupant as a gift from Government and subject to no tribunal. A received from Government the said percentage of the net proceeds of the trees agreed to be sold to B. B under the contract above mentioned, claimed the sum received by A from the Government. Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the sum. What B, was claiming was a gift of bonus from the Government to A, which was not and could not have been in the contemplation of the parties when the contract was made and which by itself was not transferable. S. 43 of the T. P. Act could not apply to the contract as standing timber is not immoveable property. The condition of a reasonable time means that the party upon whom it is incumbent duly fulfils his obligation notwithstanding protracted delay so long as such delay is attributable to causes beyond his control and he has neither acted negligently nor unreasonably. The question of what is reasonable time for the performance of the contract is one to be decided by the particular circumstances of each case. (1893) A. C. 22 ; (1898) A. C. 486 and (1903) A. ——S. 56—Becomes unlawful—War—Effect of, on contracts.

The effect of war on contracts between subjects of countries which were at peace, unless they are of a very special kind is not to avoid them totally but to merely suspend the remedies of one or the other of the parties to them. Such contract remains in abeyance during the continuance of hostilities and can be enforced when peace is established. But if the contract requires continuous performance of mutual duties by the parties to it and such duties cannot be so mutually performed during the war, and, further if the suspension of such mutual rights and obligations for an indefinite period would go much beyond merely placing he contract in abeyance, the contract becomes, in the outbreak of war, void, as taking it up upon cessation of hostilities would be something more than renewing it. It would, in fact, be substituting for it an entirely new contract. A like rule would be applied to a partnership between subjects of belligerent states. On outbreak of hostilities between the Governments of the shipper and the shipmaster all contracts of affreightment are put an end to. One contract is rescinded by another between the same parties when the latter is inconsistent with and renders impossible the performance of, the former, but though they differ in terms, their legal effect is the same. The second is merely a ratification of the first and the two must be construed together where the new contract is consistent with the existence of the former one. It has no effect unless or until it is performed and further where parties enter into a contract which if valid, would have the effect, by implication, of rescinding a former contract, and it turns out that the second transaction cannot operate as the parties intended, it does not have the effect, by implication of affecting their rights in respect of the former transaction. ———S. 62—Essentials of novation—Mortgage—Sale with a view to discharge mortgage—Nature of the transaction.

A suit was brought for foreclosure of a mortgage executed on 14th of August 1908. It was of the simplest possible character, being a claim for the amount still due on the mortgage after making allowance for a payment of Rs. 9,000 made on 17th October 1917. On that date the mortgagor sold a portion of the property and paid the Rs. 9,000 he received for the sale to the mortgagees towards satisfaction of the mortgage debt. The purchasers happened to be the mortgagees. The mortgagor originally agreed to sell the property for Rs. 9,000 on the 9th January 1916, and he agreed also that the purchaser might retain enough of the purchase-money to pay off the mortgage.

But the defendant mortgagor did not carry out his agreement till he was compelled to do so by a decree of a Civil Court in a suit instituted under the Specific Relief Act. The sale-deed was eventually executed by the Court for him on 17th October 1917, by which time the amount due on the mortgage was considerably in excess of Rs. 9,000. Held the effect of the sale was not to relieve the mortgagor of his liability to pay the mortgage debt. ———S. 63—Release of dower.

Under Mahomedan Law, the dower is a debt and the moment it is settled, it is enforceable as a debt. The dower becomes the property of the wife by the mere contract and she may therefore deal with or dispose of it before taking its possession. The woman is entitled to give it up or relinquish it in the continuance of the contract. Such relinquishment need not take place immediately after the husband's death. She can relinquish it at any time. It can be remitted in favour of the heir after the husband's death. No consideration is needed for such relinquishment, but free assent must be established. As the debt is enforceable under the Contract Act, it can also be released under S 63. It is doubtful, however, whether a dower debt could be discharged by verbal relinquishment. Discovered to be void.

——S. 65—'Discovered to be void.'

A Hindu reversioner to an estate in Oudh sued for a declaration that a will alleged to have been made by the last male owner directing his widows to adopt was invalid and void and obtained a decree to that effect. He was also declared entitled to succeed to the estate on the death of the last surviving widow. Subsequently the reversioner transferred his right to half the estate in favour of the plaintiff's predecessor in title, for a consideration of Rs. 25,100—agreeing to put the vendee in proprietary possession of the estate after the death of the last surviving widow. In a suit by the plaintiff after the death of the widow for recovery of the estate or for the purchase money. Held that there was no valid transfer of the estate in favour of the plaintiff's predecessor-in-title inasmuch as the vendor had at the date of the conveyance a mere spes successionis which he could not validly transfer under S. 6 of the Transfer of Property Act; that the suit for possession must therefore fail; that the plaintiff however was entitled to recover the consideration paid for the sale with interest thereon from the date of suit: and that the case was governed by S. 65 of the Contract Act, the cause of action having arisen after the death of the last surviving widow when alone the vendee discovered that CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872), S. 65—Scope of.

A minor cannot in equity be forced to restore the amount of a loan taken by him on a void contract. A distinction in this connection must be drawn between a case where a particular specific property passes and is capable of recovery and a case where money passes. A contract made by a minor is nudum pactum ab initio and the provisions of S. 38 of the Specific Relief Act dealing with the rescission of the contracts have no application thereto. (*Findlay, A. Scope of.

The section deals with (a) agreements and (b) contracts Section 65 deals with (a) agreements enforceable by law and (b) with agreements not so enforceable. By clause (g) of S. 2 an agreement not enforceable by law is said to be void. An agreement discovered to be void is one discovered to be not enforceable by law, and on the language of the section, would include an agreement that was void in that sense from its inception as distinct from a contract that becomes void.

The agreement to sell the right of reversioner is manifestly void from its inception, because its subject-matter is incapable of being bound by sale. CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872), S. 68—Voidable contract.

——S. 68—Litigation expenses—Payment of father's debts.

The general rule is that a minor is incapable of entering into contract and that such a contract is absolutely void and unenforceable. S. 68 of the Contract Act is an exception to the general rule and the minor's estate is liable for the necessaries supplied to him. Moneys paid to a minor for the discharge of his father's decretal debts, for the recovery of which, nothing was done, cannot be called necessaries but moneys borrowed by him for the necessary costs of a Civil or Criminal proceeding are held as necessaries within S. 68 of the Contract Act. CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872), S. 69—Scope of.

Per Spencer, J.—The vendee of properties who had received specific notice that the sale deed standing in the name of his vendor was only nominal, unenforceable and had not been given effect to, is not a bona fide purchaser without notice. But where after taking the sale deed he pays off incumbrances and tries to preserve the property from the clutches of creditors, his payments are bona fide and he is a person "interested" within the meaning of S. 69 of the Contract Act—Though it is well established that Ss. 69 and 70 of the Contract Act were not designed for the benefit of persons who are mere volunteers, a person who pays off incumbrances on the property purchased after his title is decreed in one court and before his title is declared bad by the court of appeal is entitled to claim the same in spite of the notice he had. In such a case, the ordinary relief he is entitled to is a personal decree and not a charge on the property.

Per Devadoss, J.:—In order to claim payments made to discharge incumbrances on property, plaintiff must show he was a volunteer and did not make the payments officiously. The onus is heavily on him to show he paid the amounts bona fide. The equitable doctrine of subrogation can not have any application to volunteers or persons whose conduct is officious. The distinction should always be kept in view of sales which are void, voidable and merely sham. The fact that the incumbrances were discharged after the vendee's title was declared to be good in the court of first instance but before the same was upset in appeal, will not make any difference as courts do not confer rights to property where the person had admittedly none. Where it is proved that defendant co-sharer was asked to join in the suit and pay his quota of the expenses and was warned that he would be responsible for the loss that might accrue by his not joining the plaintiffs in filing a suit on the mortgage; it cannot be said that he has not had the option. But it is not necessary that he should have had option of joining in the suit when he gladly availed himself of the benefit of the plff.'s action. Where a person does an act which is greatly beneficial to himself and which is sure to benefit another, the former cannot claim contribution from the latter ; in other words where a person is bound to do an act, or would do an act, whether another consents to it or not, the former cannot claim contribution even though the latter derives benefit in consequence of the act. In short, where the benefit to himself is great, a person cannot be said to do the thing for another within the meaning of S. 70 but where defendant applied to be and become co-plaintiff he is liable to contribute. 45 I. and is entitled to a fair remuneration for the services actually rendered and in the former case the terms of the agreement may be considered in determining the proper remuneration and, except as evidence as to the amount of remuneration, the 'party and party' fee under S. 27 of the Legal Practitioner's Act, does not come into question (*Hallifax, A J. ——Ss. 70 and 69—Enjoying benefit—Bound by law to pay.

S. 69 of the Contract Act does not authorize a person who made a payment to protect his own interest from recovering from the person on whose behalf he ostensibly paid it, unless the latter was bound in law to pay the money. He cannot also recover under S. 70 of the Act unless the person for whom he paid the money had not only benefited from the payment but had also had the opportunity of expressing his acceptance or rejection of such benefit. The plaintiff purchased a tenure in execution of a money decree against the tenants when the latter were in arrear with their rents. The landlord having later on obtained a decree for such rents against the out going tenants put up the tenure to sale which was set aside on plaintiff depositing the decretal amount: the plaintiff is not entitled to recover the amount from the original tenants either under S. 69 or under S. 70 (Bucknill, J.) SRIMATI SURADHANI DEBI v. HARI CHARAN MAHTO. 1921 Pat. 208 : 3 Pat. ——S. 70—Gratuitously—Scope of—Plaintiff interested in doing act—Benefit to another—Right to reimbursement.

S. 70 is not applicable to a case where a person does some act for his own benefit which unavoidably benefits his neighbours or any other person. A suit for contribution of the expenses of digging a tank which benefits both the plaintiff and the defendant is not maintainable unless it can be shown that the act done by the plaintiff is done solely for the defendant and but for which it would not have been done. Even if the defendant was liable, plaintiff was not entitled to a charge on the defendant's property. Lawfully.

On a sale of the land, the vendors left a portion of the consideration in the hands of the vendees for payment to certain of their (vendors') creditors who held a mortgage over property other than that sold. The vendees paid a sum in excess of the sum directed to be paid by the vendors and sued to recover it from the vendors : Held, that the vendees were not entitled to recover the amount claimed inasmuch as the money paid as interest was a gratuitous payment, the property mortgaged to secure the sum due to the creditors being no part of the property sold and the fact that the vendors benefited by the payment was immaterial. ——— S. 70—'Lawfully'—Hindu Reversioner paying money to prevent sale for road cess.

The word "lawfully", in S. 70 is not a mere surpulsage and a person must have lawful interest in making the payment. A Hindu Reversioner's interest in the estate is a mere expectancy, and he has no lawful interest in the payment of money to prevent a sale (of the estate held by a widow as heiress to her husband) for non-payment of road-cess, and is not entitled to be reimbursed. ——— S. 70—Scope of—Property sold in execution—Third person paying off—Compensation

S 70 applies to a case where the person for whose benefit the payment is made is a large caste and is sued in a representative character, under O. I., R. 8, C. P. C. The section though wide will enable the Court to do substantial justice. 38 C, I. Rel. on. In proceedings under S. 14 of the Bengal Reg. (VIII of 1819 the Collector acts not in a judicial but in a ministerial capacity Those who deposit money on receipt of a notice under S. 14 are not in the same position as persons who pay off a claim brought against them in an ordinary suit in which they had a full opportunity of resisting and who, not having availed themselves of such opportunity then, are debarred from doing so thereafter. Whether or not he contests the claims, a talukdar, to stop a sale under S. 14, has to deposit the full amount claimed, and such deposit does not preclude him from suing for its recovery in an ordinary suit. ——Ss. 72 and 15—Coercion—Wrongful attachment of property—Payment of claim—Suit for recovery of money paid—Voluntary payment.

Where property of one person is wrongfully attached in execution of a decree against another and the real owner pays off the decree amount under protest to save the property from seizure, the owner is entitled to demand repayment of that sum from the decree holder as being an involuntary payment made under coercion. This is the law both in England and in India. 8 I.A. 93 Rel. The word 'Coercion' in S. 72 is used in its general and ordinary sense in which it is defined in S. 15. The fact that the real owner could have sued the judgment-debtor under S. 69 or S. 70 of the Contract Act for reimbursement or that he could have preferred a claim against the attachment under O. 21, R. 58, C.P. ——S. 72—Coercion—Decree—Money recovered under—Suit to recover back.

The rule laid down in Marriot v. Hampton that money received under a judgment or decree cannot be recovered back in a fresh suit while the decree under which it was recovered remains in force rests on the ground that the original decree must be taken to have been subsisting until it was reversed. In order to bring this rule into force there must be bona fides on the part of the party who has got the benefit of the opponent's payment. The principle will not bar a suit by the other party if the party enforcing payment acts unconscientiously and knows he has no right to the money. (*Chandavarkar, A. C. The superior landlord of a taluk obtained a decree for rent against the auction purchaser and threatened to bring the whole taluk to sale. The purchaser of a portion of the taluk deposited the decree amount in Court so as to stop the sale and sued for its recovery. Held, that plaintiffs were not entitled to get back from the landlord the decretal amount deposited by them as they were jointly liable for the rent payable for the whole taluk. The principle, that where money has been paid by the plaintiff to the defendant under compulsion of legal process which is afterwards discovered not to have been due, the plaintiff cannot recover it back in an action for money had and received, cannot apply to a case where money was deposited by the plaintiff on the faith of an order which stated explicitly that the money would be retained in Court pending the determination of the question whether the money belonged to rival claimants and the Court without notice to the depositor and his alleged creditor, paid it out to a claimant on his application. Extent of damages.

——S. 73—Extent of damages—Measure—Contract for sale of goods—Breach--Rise in value after breach--Mitigation of damages.

On a breach of contract for the sale of negotiable securities, where the breach is due to the fault of the buyer, the measure of damages is the difference between the contract price at the date of the breach with an obligation on the part of the seller to mitigate the damages by getting the best price he can upon that date. If the seller retains the shares after the breach, the speculation as to the way the market will subsequently go is the speculation of the seller, not of the buyer ; the seller cannot recover from the buyer the loss below the market price at the date of the breach if the market fails ; nor is he liable to the purchaser for the profit and to submit to a corresponding reduction of damages, if the market rises. A plaintiff who sues for damages owes the duty of taking all reasonable steps to mitigate the loss consequent upon the breach and cannot claim as damages any sum due to his own neglect. But the loss to be ascertained is the loss at the date of breach. If at that date the plaintiff could do something to mitigate the damage, the defendant is entitled to the benefit of it. But the fact that, by reason of the loss of the contract which defendant has failed to perform, the plaintiff obtains the benefit of another contract which is of value to him does not entitle the defendant to the benefit of the latter contract. pany failed to supply the coal as agreed upon, and the appellant Company sued for damages for breach of contract assessing the damages at the difference between the agreed price and the market price. There was no contract to supply to the former the identical coal obtained from the collieries. On the contrary, it was expressly provided that that coal purchased, from the respondents was to be supplied from the respondents' stock. Again no contract was entered into between the appellants and respondents or between the appellants and the Ice Factory in whose favour the special indent certified by the Dy. Controller "Coal Supplies", was obtained the supply of coal being regulated on account of war, that the appellants should deliver over to the Ice Factory the coal that should be delivered to them under the contract of the 11th October, 1917 The indent was, no doubt manipulated in the way in order to get the use of wagons. The appellant's name did not appear on the indent. The respondents did appear. No evidence was given as to a particular relations between the respondents and the Ice Factory. Held, whatever those relations may have been and whatever obligations rest upon the respondents, the appellants would not have been bound, had the agreement of the 11th October been performed, to sell or deliver to the Ice Factory the coals which should be delivered to the appellants out of the respondent stock. The Ice Factory was not the appellants only customer. Had the coals purchased been delivered to the appellants in pursuance of their contract, the latter would have been entitled to sell them in the open market at the market price, and that being so, the damages were rightly assessed at the difference between the contract price and that market-price. Under a contract in writing dated 21—8—1918 defts. agreed to buy from plaintiffs 25 bales of yarn. The contract was in these terms : "This day we have purchased from you the undermentioned goods in accordance with the bazaar rules cotton yarn of Japan shipment for February. March 1918 is to be given whenever the same arrive earlier or later, and on the safe arrival of the same by steamer." On 25—9—1918 defts. wrote to plffs. that unless the goods were delivered in 8 days the contract was to be treated as cancelled. On 12—10 -1918 the goods arrived in Bombay and the plffs. required the defts. to take delivery On 15 —10 —1918 defts replied that that the 8 days' period having already expired the contract was cancelled and that they were not bound to pay for the goods or take delivery of them. In an action for damages, Held that having regard to the express provisions of the contract with reference to late shipment, the September shipment was contract shipment which the defendants were bound to accept. The date of breach was 15—10—1918 when defendants improperly repudiated the contract. As the property in the goods had not passed to the defendants, plffs. were entitled to recover the difference between the contract price and the market price on the day of the breach. ——S. 73—Measure of damages—Sale of goods—Date of breach.

On 13th September 1920, the plffs. sold to the defts. one hundred bales of yarn of which seventy-five were for ready and twenty-five for September delivery. The defts. took delivery of twenty-four bales on 17th September 1920, twelve bales on 4th October 1920, and a further lot of twelve bales on 21st October 1920, but they failed to take delivery of the remaining fifty two bales. After writing several letters to the defts. the plffs. sold the bales by public auction on 2nd March 1921, and claimed Rs. 11,035 1-4 as difference in the contract price and the amount realised on sale. The defts contended that the date of the breach of contract as regards twenty-five bales of September delivery was at the end of September 1920, and that of twenty-seven bales of ready delivery was in September 1920 but that they were not liable to pay damages on the basis of rates prevailing in January or March 1921.

CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872), S. 73—Measure of Damages.

Held, (1) that the property in the goods did not pass to the defts. and the plffs could not, therefore, rely on the auction sale in March 1921, (2) that there was no understanding between the parties after the due date that if the defts. failed to take delivery of the goods the plffs. were entitled to go into the market and sell at the then market price; and (3) that the whole of the forty-eight bales of which delivery was taken must be taken to be appropriated to the ready contract, and that the date of the breach as regards ready delivery was eight days from 13th September 1920 and as regards September delivery it was 30th September 1920. In an ordinary contract for the purchase and sale of land where the vendor contracts to make out a marketable title the Court may find an implied agreement that without any fault on the part of the vendor if he was not able to make out a marketable title the bargain will be off and that the vendor would have only to pay the purchasers' cost of the agreement and the inspection of the title deeds. However, if the vendor is found to be guilty of default of a deliberate nature in breaking the contract the damages will be calculated on a higher scale the measure of which will be the difference between the contract price and the market price on the date of the breach. When the deft. through whom plff. ordered goods by an indent placed the order with their London agents the plff. who indented practically contracted with the deft's London agent and plff became the purchaser from the agents of the deft. The plff. under the contract was bound to retire the draft on the due date. He having failed to do so the property in the goods did not pass to the plff. and the London agents remained the owner of the goods. The deft. who was the drawee in case of need retired the draft and obtained possession of the shipping documents but he had no right to cancel the contract and retain possession of the goods after he had retired the draft since the original contract of purchase and sale still existed. But on retiring the draft the property in the goods passed to on retiring the deft. But under the contract of purchase and sale it would only dispose of the goods on plff's account and until he did so the plff's right as purchaser to the goods on payment existed and deft. could no refuse the tender of the cheque made by the plff. after deft. retired the draft. Therefore the plff was entitled to damages namely the difference between the market value of the goods on the day of which he sent the cheque and the amount due by him on the draft. ———S. 73—Measure of damages—Infringement of right—Nominal damages.

Though every breach of duty arising out of contract gives rise to an action for damages without proof of actual damage the amount of damages recoverable is, as a general rule, governed by the extent of the actual damages sustained in consequence of the defendant's act. In cases admitting proof of such damage the amount must be established with reasonable certainty. But this does not mean that absolute certainty is required; nor in all cases is there a necessity for direct evidence as to the amount. Damages are not uncertain for the reason that the loss sustained is incapable of proof with the certainty of mathematical demonstration or is to some extent contingent and incapable of precise measurement. Only such approximation to certainty is required as would satisfy the mind of a prudent and reasonable person: Cases on the subject reviewed (Mookerjee and Chotzner, JJ.) KINGSLEY v. THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA.

——S. 73—Measure of damages—Breach of contract.

The law as to damages on forward contracts may be summed up as follows: (1) Damages to be assessed with reference to the date fixed for delivery. (2) If that date is in future, the Court must estimate the rate as best it can and it matters not that the estimate is to a great extent speculative. (3) If the plaintiff has rescinded the contract and the defendant proves that after rescission plaintiff has made a fresh contract at better rates or that acting reasonably and as a prudent man, he might have made such a contract, this will be considered a ground for abatement of damages. (4) If plaintiff after rescission makes a fresh contract, he does so at his own risk and if he get a worse rate he cannot make use of that for the purpose of enhancing his damages. (*Pratt, J. In a suit for damages for not taking delivery of goods if the party whose duty it is to prove damages, does not give the best evidence, every presumption should be made against him; if there is any range, the range should be taken against him; but this does not relieve the Court altogether of the duty of assessing the damages as best it can, on evidence and materials actually before it. ———Ss. 73 and 212, Ill. (a)—Remote and indirect loss—Damages—Agreement to realise money and to pay certain debt out of it—Failure to pay—Suit by creditor—Costs of suit whether claimable.

A person agreed to collect debts due and to pay out of collections a certain debt. He collected but failed to pay. Held, he was liable for the loss caused thereby. There is nothing in the Contract Act which renders the principles of English Law regarding the liability of party for the consequence of a breach inapplicable to India. Illustration (a) to Sec. 212 is traceable to the distinction between collateral damages arising from the retention of money and from failure to perform other contracts. As a consequence of the failure to pay the debt, plaintiff was sued upon and debt was recovered from him with costs. Held, defendant was not liable for the costs of the suit, as the law does not recognize consequential damage arising from delay in payment of money. ——S. 74—Applicability of—Chit fund—Stipulations in bond executed by successful bidder—When a penalty - Instalment bond—Waiver of default for one or two instalments—Effect of.

The defendant was a subscriber to a chit conducted by plff. and was the successful bidder at the second auction held in connection with the chit which was to run over 12 instalments. On taking the prize the deft. executed in favour of the plff the stake-holder, a bond providing inter alia that in case deft. failed to pay his subscriptions he was not only to forfeit the dividend, interest and premium, but was also to pay the whole amount on demand with interest thereon at 1½ percent permensem from the date of the auction and that the deft. should within 15 days execute another document to the plff. for the due payment of the chit amounts of the subsequent instalments and for abiding by the terms of the bond. Deft. executed the other document above referred to and paid the third, fourth and fifth instalments duly and defaulted in the payment of the sixth. In a suit by plff. to recover the amount due under the bond, Held that the terms of the bond as regards (1) the defendant's liability for future instalments from the date of default (2) his deprivation of the dividend and interest and (3) the imposition on him of liability for interest on the amount due from him at 18 per cent from the date of his default did not either each taken by itself or altogether, amount to a penal stipulation. In cases like this the court has to decide whether the terms are unreasonable as a whole and whether they are so unreasonable that the parties never contemplated that they should receive effect. The waiver by the plff. of his right to enforce the terms of the bond in connection with fourth and fifth instalments did not affect his right to use the coercive measures provided by the bond in cases of future default. Compound Interest.

——S. 74—Compound interest.

A stipulation that on default of due payment of interest at 9 per cent per annum on a bond, every half-year, interest at 24 per cent per annum was payable on the unpaid balance of interest, is not unconscionable and can be enforced. (Tudball and Piggott, JJ.) DEO KUAR v. GULAB KUAR. 20 I. C. 949.

——S. 74—Compound interest — Relief against penalty.

The Courts do not lean towards compound interest, they do not award where there is no stipulation but where there is a clear agreement to pay, it is in the absence of disentitling circumstances allowed. Under a mortgage deed, it was agreed that if any of the monthly instalments of interest was not paid on its due date, such unpaid instalment of interest should be capitalised and added to the amount of the principal loan and would henceforth carry interest at the rate of twelve annas per month leviable as simple interest. A provision is further made that all such additions by way of capitalised interest should be chargeable upon the mortgaged property.

Held, such a provision was not penal so as to bring the case under S. 74 of the Cont act Act (Fawcett, J.) NADERSHAW v SHIRINIBAI.

When there is an express contract stipulating that on breach of it, the amount deposited shall be forfeited, the contract must be given effect to without reference to the section There is no distinction between contracts of sale and contracts of lease stipulating for a forfeiture of deposit in case of breach. The section does not apply to cases where a sum of money is paid as a precautionary provision for the due performance of the contract. It applies only to terms which are included to provide a certain sum of money by way of damages to the party whose contract has been broken. The reasonableness of the deposit is one of the factors in determining whether there was deposit in reality, although it goes by that name in the contract. The question whether a sum of money paid is a deposit to be forfeited or a penalty, is a question of fact to be determined on the facts of each case. ——S. 74—Forfeiture of earnest money—Non-performance of contract.

A deposit unless paid on any special terms, is not merely part payment but it is an earnest. If the contract be performed it is brought into account as part payment ; on the other hand if the purchaser makes default, it may be retained by the vendor. The deposit is thus a security for the performance of the purchaser's part of the contract. The test in each case is, did the parties mutually agree, expressly or by implication that the sum paid was to be treated not merely as part payment, but as guarantee for due performance of contract. Where the contract gives the lessor an express right of forfeiture for non-performance of the contract or non observance of its conditions, this right is not enlarged in its operation by an appeal to the general rule that where the contract goes off by default of the purchaser. the vendor is entitled to retain the deposit. The position is different where there is no express clause of forfeiture, but simply a payment by way of deposit which implies liability to forfeiture. Where a mortgage deed provides that the mortgagee should be in possession of the property in lieu of interest and the period fixed for redemption was four years, a provision that interest was to be paid in addition after the 4 years is no stipulation for increased interest and S. 74 of the Contract Act is not applicable to the case. Interest from Default.

———S. 74—Interest from default— Penal Interest—Power of Court to relieve against.

S. 74 after the amendment in 1899 is comprehensive enough to enable the Court to grant relief whenever the rate of interest appears to be penal. The test is whether the agreement to pay the damage for the breach of covenant or contract is unconscionable and extravagant such as no Court ought to allow to be entered into. A stipulation that upon default of one or two instalments not only would the whole balance due become forthwith payable but would carry interest at 75 per cent. per annum is one by way of penalty. S. 16 also applied to this case. (Mookerjee and Beachcroft, JJ.) KHAGARAM DAS v RAM SANKER DAS. 42 Cal. 652 : 19 C W. N. 775 : 27 I. C 815 : 21 C. L. J. 79

CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872), S. 74—Interest from default.

———S. 74—Interest from default—Bond—Further interest and 25 per cent. more to be paid in default—Whether penal.

Where in a bond it is provided that, on default of payment of principal and interest on a particular date, 25 per cent. shall be added to the total amount then due and further interest at 12½ per cent. on the consolidated amount shall be charged, the provision is penal and therefore it is unenforceable. ——S. 74—Interest from default—Interest—Default—Exorbitant rate—Penalty.

Exorbitant interest from date of default may be a penalty within Section 74 even though no interest is payable until default. A covenant to pay compound interest is by itself not penal. S. 74 does not enact that the stipulation for the payment of enhanced interest from the date of default ought always to be considered penal (*Kanhaiya Lal, J. CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872, S. 74—Interpretation.

An agreement by a borrower, in return for a smaller sum to repay a larger one on a given day representing the original principal and interest, is not contrary to law and the Court cannot award relief under S. 74 as the transaction is not penal. The word 'penal' in S 74 implies that there is a main contract and a subsidiary contract providing for some more drastic consequences in the event of the breach of the original and main contract. It is totally inapplicable to a term of the original contract or consequence of the original contract not owing to breach but owing to fulfilment. (Coutts-Trotter, J.) SUKKUL SOWCAR v. TIRUMALA ROW. 51 I. C. 295 : 24 M L. T. 420

——S. 74—Interpretation Duty of the Court —To relieve against penalties.

The addition of the words "or if the contract contains any other stipulation by way of penalty" to Sec. 74 of the Indian Contract Act has enlarged the scope of that section and it has the effect of getting rid of all subtle technicalities in the application of the equitable principle regulating the duty of the Court to relieve against the penalties. (Abdur Rahim, O. C J. and Seshagiri Aiyar, J.) PILLAY v. PILLAI. 37 I.C. 799.

A mortgage for an amount due, found on settling accounts recited the conditions of repayment by instalments in kind, on failure of any of which, the mortgagor was bound to return the whole amount with interest at once. Held Per Abdur Rahim, J.—The proper reading of the document leads to the conclusion that the stipulation was for the repayment of the balance of the amount and not the payment in kind. Per Ayling, J.—Contra :—The salutary principle of the law is that the party breaking the primary terms of contract, should not be placed in a more favourable position than the party entitled to enforce it. Hence the mortgagors were liable to pay the unpaid balance of the kind on default The primary proviso of paying the consideration of the former dues in kind is enforceable under S. 37, Contract Act ; and the defendant cannot be relieved under S. 74 of the Act, treating the stipulation as a penalty. The proviso for payment of the total unpaid instalments on default of any one might be taken as penal ; and the proviso for the interest therein is penal. But the Court ought to allow the plaintiff that much, which he would have got in the absence of the stipulations in consequence of the breach. S 74 deals not with the primary terms, but with the stipulations in the contract. (Abdur Rahim and Ayling, JJ.) SURYADEVARA SEETARAMAYYA v. SURYADEVARA KOTAYYA. 35 I. C. 111.

—— S. 74—Interpretation —Penalty—Relief against.

If the mortgagor pleads that the stipulation as to the payment of interest is penal, the question before the Court is not what the mortgagee has actually charged and whether that is penal or not It must decide for itself whether original stipulation as to interest was penal or not ; and if it was penal, what reasonable compensation the plaintiff is entitled to get. —— —— S. 74—Meaning of penalty.

The idea is very common that what is called a "penalty clause" in a contract is a mere brutum fulmen, an agreement that neither party has any intention of enforcing at all to any extent. Such an agreement would certainly not be mentioned in the Contract Act, and in fact would not be agreement at all A penalty clause merely fixes a maximum for damages which would be difficult to state in terms of money, and anyhow does not deprive the aggrieved party of his right to damages that can be so estimated. 12 N. CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872), S. 74—Measure of damages.

Measure of Damages.

——S. 74—Measure of damages—Breach of Contract—Damages— Liquidated damages or penalty.

Whatever expression may be used in a contract to describe the payment to be made in case of a breach, the question must always be whether the construction contended for renders the agreement unconscionable and extravagant and one which no Court ought to allow to be enforced. No abstract rule can be laid down as to what may or may not be extravagant or unconscionable without reference to the particular facts and circumstances which are established in each particular case. Where at the time of making a contract it was not possible to foresee the extent of the injury which might be sustained in case of a breach, and the damages though very real, were difficult of proof and likely to entail considerable expense in ascertaining and the parties agreed that on breach of the contract, £500 which was a reasonable amount, should be paid as liquidated damages and not as a penalty, Held, that, the party, who suffered the injury by the breach could recover that sum as liquidated damages without proof of the actual damage suffered by him. Proof of Damages.

——S. 74—Proof of damages—Damages—Quantum—Proof lies entirely on plaintiff—Defendant ex parte.

In an undefended action for unliquidated damages based on a breach of contract, the plaintiff should not only offer proof of the material avertments in the plaint which go to form his cause of action but also the actual quantum of damages he has sustained apart from the inflated statement as to damages usually contained in the plaint. Reduction for Punctual Payment.

——S. 74—Reduction for punctual payment.

Where a deed provides for a rate of interest but also contains a covenant to accept interest at a reduced rate if paid punctually, the covenant does not make the original rate a penalty within S. 74 of the Act. Unconscionable Bargain.

——S 74—Unconscionable bargain—Penalty—Relief against—Improvident transaction, not a ground for.

See ALSO 48 I C. 1 (P C.).

——S. 74—Unconscionable bargain—The sum demanded enormously greater than the sum advanced.

By making short term loans and insisting on capitalizing the interest immediately it falls due, a money lender may pile up compound interest at an oppressive and unconscionable rate But there is nothing inherently wrong or oppressive in his securing interest upon interest after the interest has been due and unpaid for a considerable time. In money lending transactions the mere fact that the sum ultimately claimed exceeds enormously the amount originally advanced is no ground for holding the transaction to be unconscionable, either in the original dealings or in the subsequent stages of the transaction. Questions as to undue influence, unconscionable bargains and dealings with expectant heirs must be decided on the provisions of the Contract Act, 1872, as amended by the Indian Contract Amendment Act, 1899, and these alone. The principles on which English Courts of Equity deal with similar questions are entirely applicable to India. (Lord Atkinson.) BALA MAL v. AHAD SHAH.

——S. 74—Unconscionable bargain—Penalty—Fixation of price of paddy due under contract—No undue influence—Power of Court to reduce price.

The plaintiffs advanced a sum of Rs. 500—and for this the defendant undertook to repay 172 maunds of paddy in the next year and the same amount in the following year. In default of delivering paddy the price was to be charged at Rs. 3—per maund. There was no suggestion that the defendant acted under any undue influence It was found that the defendant had to pay under this agreement nearly double the amount advanced, Held that there was no ground for holding that the stipulation was a penalty and the Court had no power to reduce the price. It was in the interests of the party that a definite rate should be fixed for the paddy and it might have been to the advantage of the defendant if the paddy at the time of payment was selling at a higher rate to be able to pay cash instead of paddy itself. ——S. 74—Unconscionable bargain—Power of Court.

A bargain is unconscionable when it is such as no man in his senses and not under delusion would make on the one hand and no honest and fair man would accept on the other. This definition is not satisfied by a case where long delay in payment brings about a position in which the discharge of the debt is impossible, the debtor being a man of sufficient intelligence to foresee the result of his inaction. Whether a particular bargain is unconscionable or not and whether a particular stipulation constitutes a penalty or not are questions of fact rather than of law. (*Drake-Brockman, J. ——S. 74—Unconscionable bargain—Penalty—Agreement to pay commission—Mortgagor's liability—Circumstances attending agreement.

Where a mortgagor, voluntarily and in pursuance of a deliberate bargain enters into an agreement to pay commission to the mortgagee and pays the amount, the parties are completely on equal terms and in a suit subsequently brought by the mortgagee, the mortgagor cannot avoid his liability for the commission paid. 34 C. 150 Ref. ——Ss. 76 and 121—Shares in a company—Contract for sale and delivery—Rights of transferee—Pledge.

Plaintiffs sold some shares to the 1st defendant who sold 25 of them to a third party and pledged 104 along with other similar shares to the second defendant Defendant 2 put forward defendant 3 as a party who was willing to advance money. In fact defendant 3 was a mere nominee of 2nd defendant and defendant 2 got possession of 305 shares fraudulently. The fraud was that he deceived defendant 1 by false pretences that he would use these shares for the purpose of raising a loan for the benefit of defendant which he did not do and which he did not intend to do, his real object being to secure himself from loss as regards the moneys due to him from 1st defendant The plaintiffs sued to recover the shares and damages from defendants 2 and 3.

Held that the plaintiff's suit was unsustainable and the remedy of the plaintiffs was to sue the 1st defendant for the purchase money. The shares were moveables or 'goods' within S. 76 of the Contract Act and the case therefore fell within S. 121 of the same Act. The plaintiffs had delivered all they had and they could not, therefore rescind the contract on the buyer's failing to pay the price unless it was stipulated by the contract that they should be so entitled. The plaintiffs as vendors agreed to sell and deliver transfers and certificates with the interests and rights which they conveyed. Such delivery passed not the property in the shares but a title legal and equitable which would enable the holder to vest himself with the shares. On delivery of the documents there was no interest left in the plaintiffs on which any equity can be founded. As between them and 1st defendant there was no fraud or misrepresentation which could vitiate the transaction. (Macleod, C. J. and Crump, J.) VADILAL v. MANEKJI. 25 Bom L. If S. 78 were construed as laying down an inflexible rule as to the passing of property not only would there be a serious limitation on the freedom of contract but there would also be an inconsistency with other sections of the Indian Contract Act e. g., S. 7. No doubt it is curious that S. 78 should not be expressed as subject to a contrary intention but the Act is a notoriously badly drafted Act and it does not purport to be exhaustive, where the intention of the parties as expressed in the conditions of the contract was that the property in the car in dispute should not pass until full price had been paid. Held, that intention would prevail in spite of S. 78. The evidence adduced in its support must not be repugnant to or inconsistent with the contract. ——— Ss. 83 and 91— Appropriation— What constitutes Delivery—Bill of lading—Discounting draft.

The commonest form of appropriating goods, to a contract for the sale of unascertained goods is by delivering them to a carrier. A very common mode of doing business is for one merchant to give an order to another to send him certain goods Here it becomes the seller's duty to appropriate the goods to the contract. The seller is by the express or implied terms of the contract authorised to select and appropriate the goods, the buyer having given a previous implied assent to the seller's appropriating. The difficulty in such cases is to determine what constitutes the appropriation. The question is one of intention but there are certain well-established rules :—(1) In the case of a contract for the sale of unascertained goods the delivery by the seller to a common carrier or, unless the effect of the shipment is restricted by the terms of the bill of lading shipment on board a ship of, or chartered for, the purchaser is an appropriation sufficient to pass the property. (2) If however the vendor when shipping the articles which he intends to deliver under the contract takes the bill of lading to his own order and does so not as agent or on behalf of the purchaser, but on his own behalf, it is held that he thereby reserves to himself a power of disposingof the property and consequently there is no final appropriation and the proper y does not on shipment pass to the purchaser. (3) If the vendor deals with or claims to retain the bill of lading in order to secure the co tract price as when he sends forward the bill of lading with a bill of excha ge attached with directions that the b ll of lading is not to be delivered to the purchaser till acceptance or payment of the bill of exchange, the appropriation is not absolute, but until acceptance of the draft or payment or tender of the price, is conditional only, and until such acceptance or payment or tender the property in the goods does not pass to the purchaser. (4) If the seller discounts a draft upon the buyer with a bank and authorises the bank to hand to the buyer a bill of lading to the order of the seller and endorsed in blank by him upon his acceptance of the draft, the intention to be inferred according to general mercantile understanding is that the seller intends to transfer the ownership when the draft is accepted but intends also to remain the owner until this has been done. S. 83 of the Contract Act applies to cases where the seller is authorised to make the apropriation and the buyer has given a previous implied assent to the appropriation where in pursuance of the contract the seller delivers the goods to a carrier forthe purpose of transmission to the buyers but retains a jus disponendi until certain conditions are fulfilled. (5) The property in the goods does not pass to the buyer until the conditions imposed by him are fulfilled This rule applies not only to delivery of goods to carriers by sea but to delivery to carriers by land (Mulla, J.) THE FORD AUTOMOBILES (INDIA), LTD v. THE DELHI MOTOR AND ENGINEERING CO. 24 Bom L R 1140 : 70 I. A seller under a contract for sale of 'ready goods sued the buyer to recover damages for not taking delivery. It was contended that the seller had not the goods in his possession at the date of the contract and the buyer, therefore, was not bound to take delivery :- Held, that if at the time of entering into the contract and during the period intervening between that date and the due date the seller could at any moment if called upon by his buyer, deliver the goods he had sufficiently complied with the terms of the contract, Further the seller cannot recover damages on the basis of resale but on the basis of difference in the market price and contract price. (Buckland, J.) MULCHAND CHANDOLIA v. KUNDANMULL,

——S. 91—Scope—English law.

S 91 does not provide for cases where the seller delivers the goods to a carrier and reserves the right of disposal. Therefore the Courts of British India resort to the rules of English common law so far as they are not inconsistent with the text of the Contract Act One of those rules is that where in pursuance of the contract, the seller delivers the goods to a carrier for the purpose of transmission to the buyer, but retains a jus disponendi until certain conditions are fulfilled, the property in the goods does not pass to the buyer until the conditions imposed by him are not fulfilled. This rule applies not only to delivery of goods to be carried by sea but to delivery to carriers by land and to canal boat companies. ———Ss. 99 and 102—Sale of goods—Broker contracting as principal—Right of stoppage in transit—Assignment by buyer—Effect of.

The term 'vendor' in S. 102 of the Contract Act is to be given a liberal meaning as including a person standing in the position of a vendor. A broker who contracts as principal with a buyer of goods has a right to enforce the contract and is entitled to sue in respect thereof. His position by virtue of his personal liability to his sellers for the price is that of an unpaid vendor with a right of stoppage in transit conferred by S. 99 of the Contract Act. Such right would be defeated if the buyer obtained the documents of title and delivered them to a second buyer who acted in good faith and gave valuable consideration for them, as such delivery would amount to an assignment under S. 102 of the Contract Act. Railway receipts are not negotiable by law and are not rendered negotiable by S. 137 of the T. P. Act. Nor was there anything to show that such receipts were negotiable by the mercantile custom of Rangoon. S. 137 of the T. P. Act merely provides that the methods of assignment in ch. 8 of the Act shall not apply to the case of certain specified documents which are for the time being by law or custom negotiable. It merely deals with the manner in which the documents to which it relates can be transferred, but it does not affect the result of the transfer when made. In order that such transfer should have in the case of railway receipts the effect of transferring the ownership of the goods, it must be established that they are not negotiable. (*Robinson, C. The measure of damages for breach of a contract to sell, is the difference between the contract rate and the rate at the date of breach. —— S 107—Sale of ascertained goods — Property when passes—Failure to pay purchase price—Effect of—Resale—Profits—Right to

Where the subject matter of a contract of sale consists of ascertained goods, the property in the goods passes to the purchaser on the conclusion of the contract of sale Thereafter though the goods remain with the seller, the purchaser has a right to demand delivery The non-payment of the price or a portion thereof does not put an end to the contract but if there is a clause in the contract to that effect the sellers might insist on the purchaser forfeiting the balance of the deposit he can avail himself of it and he can sell the remainder of the goods on account of the purchaser. S. 107 of the Contract Act applies only where notice has been given by the seller to the buyer of his intention to resell after the lapse of a reasonable time (Sanderson, C. J. and Richardson, J.) SHIB NARAIN PAL v. RAM BILASH MARWARI. 65 I. C. 263.

——S. 107—Sale of goods—Failure to take delivery—Re-sale—Damages.

——S. 107—Measure of damages—Appropriation of the goods

Defendant had to take the delivery of certain goods but he only took delivery of a part but failed to take delivery of the balance which was resold by the plaintiff. Held, that the measure of plaintiff's compensation was the difference between the contract price and the price of the goods on the date of the breach and not the difference between the price that the plaintiff realized and the contract price as no appropriation had been made by the plaintiff with respect to the goods. ——S. 107—Mercantile contracts—Time is essence of contract.

The general rule is that time is the essence of mercantile contracts and particularly when a party agreed to make payment and take delivery as soon as the goods arrived. Provisions in the contract regarding payment of interest and liability for godown rent do not take the case out of the general rule where no evidence had been offered that the plaintiffs in fact took money to the Hindustan Mercantile Association when it was their duty to make an unconditional offer of cash to the defendants and wrote asking to be told where to make payment, several days after receipt of the defendants' warning.

Held plaintiffs failed to make out any breach of contract by the defendants which would entitle them to damages (Martineau and Campbell, JJ.) THE FIRM DURGA DAT JAGAN NATH OF DELHI v. THE FIRM RAM PARTAB SUKH DAYAL OF DELHI. 1923 Lah 138.

——S. 107—Sale of goods—Rights of vendor—Reasonable time for re-sale of goods.

Where a right of re-sale is given by the contract between the parties, it is not necessary that the property in the goods should pass to the purchaser to enable the seller to re-sell the goods and claim the difference between the price of the goods as originally contracted for and the price fetched at the re-sale. If the goods have been resold by the vendor within a reasonable time after the breach of contract by the purchaser, the measure of the damages will be the difference between the price agreed to be given and the price realized on the re-sale, with the costs and expenses of the re-sale, but if the re-sale has been unreasonably delayed until the market has fallen, the price realized on such re-sale will not afford a true criterion of the damage. If the seller elects to re-sell, he must do so within a reasonable time from the date on which the contract was finally repudiated by the buyer. Any other conclusion might cause undue hardship to the buyer, for it will then be open to the seller with the deliberate intention of causing loss to the buyer, to delay the re-sale until the market has fallen and then re-sell the property, and thereby cause to the buyer a loss which he might not have sustained had the re-sale taken place within a reasonable time from the date of the breach of contract. So far as the English Law is concerned, when an unpaid seller of goods resells them under an expressed power reserved by him, he thereby rescinds the contract. Under the Contract Act, there is no reason why an unpaid vendor should not resell the goods "on account and risk of the purchaser" as specified in the contract, and enforce at the same time all other rights given to him by the contract in so far as those rights are not affected by the re-sale. ———S. 107—Sale of goods—Breach of contract—Re-sale after notice—Effect of invalid sale—Damages, measure of.

If the seller exercises his right of re-sale he rescinds the contract of sale, the property revests in himself and he sells it as owner. A seller of goods who gives notice of re-sale and makes an invalid re-sale can recover damages for breach of contract from the defaulting buyer. The measure of damages in such a case is the market value on the date of the breach minus the value obtained on re-sale. The seller can revoke his notice of re sale. But if the buyer pays the contract price and re-sale expenses before the re sale is effected, or within a reasonable time after revocation of the notice the seller must deliver the goods to the buyer. After the re-sale the defaulting purchaser has no rights under the original contract, and he cannot claim the goods upon payment of the contract price. 15 B. A consignor of goods delivered them to a shipping company for transit and received a document called mate's receipt. The company was to deliver the goods to the shipper or his nominee at the place of delivery. There was a circular of the Company to the effect that the goods would not be delivered without production of the so-called mate's receipts. The shipper pledged the receipt with a money lender but obtained delivery of the goods without production of the receipt. In a suit by the money-lender for damages against the shipping Co., held, that the mate's receipt as it was called could not be regarded to be a negotiable security nor a bill of lading, nor a document of title, and that no practice of general application among merchants existed by which such a receipt was regarded as negotiable in the ordinary course of business. The document being a simple ordinary receipt for goods and the shipowner was not liable to the assignee in the absence of notice to him. ———S. 113—Merchantability of goods—Test of—Damages to major portion of goods—Effect of.

CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872). S. 113.

The effect of S. 113 of the Contract Act is that when there is no express warranty in the sale of goods, there is an implied warranty of merchantability. The question whether goods are "merchantable" in law is a question of mixed fact and law. A bale of a thousand pieces of piecegoods of which nine-tenths are damaged, however slightly, is radically unmerchantable and a seller cannot force such goods on an unwilling buyer. In such cases there is no room for the application of the principle of de minimis. 8 L. W. 192 : (1910) 2 K. B. 937 : 1 10, 2 K B. 831 Ref. ———Ss. 113 and 116—Sale of goods by description—Warranty—Inspection or goods—Effect.

Under S.113 of the Contract Act which follows the English Law, where goods are sold by description there is an implied warranty that the goods shall be of merchantable quality This is so even when the purchase is after inspection, but if the buyer has examined the goods there is no implied warranty with regards defects which such examination would have revealed (*Wallis, C. ———S. 113—Sale of goods not answering description—Remedy of purchaser.

Where goods offered for sale in execution of a decree are described as of a particular denomination, and every circumstance points to the buyer having contracted for the specific goods produced as described and the goods tendered do not answer that description the purchaser is entitled to reject them and if he has paid for them, to recover the price as money had and received for his use. (Mitra, A. J. C.) TUKARAM v. DEOJI.
54 I C. 315.

———S. 113—Sale of goods—Warranty.

S. 113 does not apply to a sale of specific goods which were before the parties at the time of the negotiations because such a sale is not one of goods as being of a certain denomination, as to give rise to the warranty referred to in the section, that the goods were such as are "commercially known by that denomination." ———S. 113—Commission Agent—Implied—Warranty.

A Commission agent, buying goods for his employer, differs from the ordinary seller in what he stands to gain by the transaction ; instead of getting a profit on the price he gets a payment by way of commission. But in other respects they are on the same footing as regards the buyer, S. 113 applies and there is an implied warranty that the goods supplied are of a certain denomination. (*Hartnoll, C. CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872), S. 114

——S. 114 —Implied contract as to warranty exists—Caveat-emptor.

In England the common law rule depends upon whether the buyer relied on his own judgment or the sellers. (3 Q B. 197 Ref.) But distinction is not made in the Indian Contract Act the construction that the words have been ordered in S. 114 imply that the buyer is relying on the sellers judgment is a strained construction of the section and there is no reason why the sellers should be excused from the performence of his contract because of what may or may not be passing in the buyer's mind, A seller of a motor car impliedly contracts to sell a car that is reasonably fit for use as a motor car. ——S. 118—Refusal of goods by buyer—Place of delivery—Costs of carriage.

It is not the duty of the purchaser who refuses to take delivery to return the goods to the seller from the place of delivery at his cost. (Griffin and Chamier, JJ.) PHAGGUMALL v. BABU LAL.
35 All. 325: 19 I. C. 254 : 11 A. L. J. 315.

——S. 118—Scope of—Acceptance.

The question of acceptance does not arise when the property in the goods has passed to the buyer. The provisions of S 118 do not apply where the property in goods has passed to the buyer ; for where the property in goods passes by appropriation on the part of the seller and assent on the part of the buyer, since the appropriation can only be of goods of the contract description, the conditions of the contract are ex hypothesi complied with. The case contemplated by S. 118 is one where there has been a contract with a condition and the condition is broken. In such a case the buyer may waive that right of rejection and accept the goods. The property in the goods then passes by the buyer's acceptance and if the buyer thereafter refuses to pay for and take delivery of the goods, the seller is entitled to sue the buyer for the price. ——S. 118—Period of seller's liability.

The liability of the seller ceases with the transmission of the delivery order, on receipt of which the buyer should, under the terms of the contract for sale, clear the goods, and from that date the seller can claim interest and godown rent. The seller's holding of the goods for the buyer is as effective as physical delivery to the buyer. (*Scott C. The plff. did not make the additions within the stipulated time; but two years later he applied for execution. The deft. resisted on the ground that time being of the essence of the contract, so much of the consent decree was voidable at his option Held, that time was not of the essence of the contract, for at the time the consent decree was made, the deft did not regard the additions which were to be made to the plff.'s house as important as he did not insist on the completion of the well and tank before the 30th June 1912 (Beaman and Heaton, JJ.) BHAGWANT GOPAL v. APPAJI.

Where the goods are sold and delivered to a buyer it is open to the buyer to have the goods in his custody for a reasonable time in order that he may examine them and see whether they comply with the warranty. At the same time, the buyer loses his rights to reject the goods by any act amounting to acceptance. Mere receipt of goods is no acceptance but such a receipt will become an acceptance if the goods are not rejected within a reasonable time. 23 C. L J. 415. Endorsement by person on it "re-payment guaranteed by me" renders that person liable as a surety from that moment and his liability is co-extensive which the debtor as regards the quantum of liability but not so as to save limitation. A payment by principal is not binding on the surety. A payment of interest creates a fresh starting point for limitation against the principal who pays it but not against the surety even though it was paid with the knowledge and consent of the surety and even at his request unless the payment is proved to have been made on behalf of the surety as well. S. 128 Contract Act which is in the nature of an interpretation clause and is directed to defining the liability of a surety upon the terms of guarantee, was not intended to affect the statute of limitation.
